

Lieut. John Crowley
Killed in New Guinea

Lieutenant John Crowley was killed Jan. 23 near Wewak, New Guinea, while in action as pilot of a fighter plane with the Fifth Air Force. Promoted to a first lieutenancy after winning the Air Medal last October for participation in 25 operation missions, he had just returned from a leave in Australia.

Lieutenant Crowley, who was 27, was the son of Mrs. John F. Crowley of 94-17 41st Ave., Winfield.

A graduate of Regis High School, Manhattan, he matriculated at Fordham University and was graduated in 1938. At Fordham he was a sports reporter for the Fordham Ram.

Lieutenant Crowley was also a member of the famed 7th Regiment in Manhattan. When it was federalized in 1941, he entered the Army. In 1942 Lieutenant Crowley was transferred to the Air Forces and started cadet training.

He took pre-flight training at Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., and primary training at Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla. He won his wings at Craig Field, Ala., in December 1942 and went overseas the following February.

Lieutenant Crowley leaves his mother and five sisters, Eleanor May, Katherine, Mrs. Elisabeth Bourguignon, Mrs. Anne Bourguignon, Mrs. Jean Berune.

A Requiem Mass was offered for him last Saturday at St. Bartholomew's Church, Whitney Ave. and Ithaca St., Elmhurst. Tablet Feb 14 1944

New York Major Killed
In Plane Crash in Italy

Maj. Kenneth John McCarthy

Maj. Kenneth John McCarthy of the Army Adjutant General's Office, who was a son of Mrs. Margaret M. McCarthy of 2258 University Avenue, the Bronx, and the late Albert G. McCarthy, was killed in an airplane crash in Italy on April 20, the War Department has notified his family. Twenty-eight years old and a native of New York, Major McCarthy lived here and was associated with the International Business Machines Corporation until his induction as a private in January, 1941.

He was a grandson of the late Thomas F. McAvoy, a political leader, and a nephew of the late Justice John A. McAvoy.

He was graduated from Regis High School here, Fordham University and the Harvard School of Business Administration. He was a member of the Harvard and New York Athletic Clubs.

Hero Pilot in Pacific
Killed in Air Crash

One of the Jap-blasting McCabe brothers of Corona is dead. A requiem mass for the younger of the two Navy heroes whose combined Pacific missions total near the 100 mark was announced today. He is Lieutenant (j.g.) Frank J. McCabe, 23, of 37-74 101st street.

His father, also a Navy man, said he has been informed that Frank was killed in a mid-air collision of planes Sept. 20 while piloting his speedy Hellcat from a carrier in the Pacific, and that a mass will be offered Monday at 10 A. M. in Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Corona.

No details of the crash have reached Chief Petty Officer Michael McCabe, whose other son, First Lieutenant John McCabe, 25, completed 50 missions last month and returned with decorations awarded by General Douglas MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey and a Presidential Unit Citation.

Dive-Bomber Pilot

John flew a dive-bomber as an officer in the Marine Corps and now is assigned to Eagle Mountain, Texas, for the instruction of new Marine pilots flying new-type planes.

He arrived home yesterday on emergency leave after being notified of his brother's death.

The War Department has sent word that Frank's body cannot be returned at this time even "if it is recovered," because of unannounced circumstances.

That is all the information that has filtered through to the bereaved family. Whether the Hellcat crashed with an Allied or enemy plane, or if it was in combat or on maneuvers, are details yet to be cleared up.

Frank served with Admiral Chester W. Nimitz and took part in numerous raids and invasions, including the one at Truk in March 1943.

After 16 months of combat, during which he earned numerous commendations for skill and courage in besting the Japs, he was given a rest period and sent to Pearl Harbor in August.

This was believed a preliminary to a furlough home and word of the homecoming was being anticipated. (Continued on Next Page)

Frank attended Our Lady of Sorrows Parochial School, St. Regis

Francis C. McCabe, Fla., was killed on Dec. 16. After operational training on the West Coast he started after the Japs in May, 1943.

Trained With Brother

At Pensacola, unknown to either of them, he was assigned to same squadron as his brother. They flew three months in training there together before their paths separated.

Their father has served the Navy 33 years, having been recalled to active duty in April, 1942. Before that his last sea duty was aboard the S. S. New Mexico, which carried President Woodrow Wilson to France after the last war for the signing of the Versailles Treaty. He is now stationed in Manhattan.

Surviving Frank also are his mother and two sisters, Mary and Nancy.

Lt. Charles Sullivan, 29,
Dies in Naval Service

Ex-Statistician for Catholic Community Program

Word of the death of Lieutenant Charles Sullivan, U. S. N., former statistician in the program department of the National Catholic Community Service headquarters in Washington, has been received here by his wife, Mrs. Kay Maroney Sullivan, of 839 Riverside Drive. Lieutenant Sullivan was twenty-nine years old. The Navy telegram of notification gave no details and did not disclose the theater of action.

Lieutenant Sullivan was a graduate of Regis High School, at 55 East Eighty-fourth Street, and City College. Surviving, besides his wife, is a ten-months-old daughter, whom he had never seen.

A requiem mass for Lieutenant Sullivan will be held at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow in St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church in Washington, with the Rev. Cornelius Collins, religious consultant to the N. C. C. S., as celebrant.
