President’s Report
Unending Gratitude

I almost never came to Regis. I didn’t want to commute two hours each way from Wappingers Falls. I didn’t want to leave my friends. I just didn’t want to go.

After my acceptance letter arrived, my parents struck a deal with me: I had to give Regis a try, but if I felt the same way after one week, I could transfer to my local high school. It took only one day for me to realize what my parents already knew. Regis altered the course of my life, and I’m so thankful that they had the foresight to push me away from the comfortable and toward the transformational.

Gratitude – for my parents’ wisdom – is at the core of the start of my Regis experience. Thirty-three years later, gratitude also overwhelmingly defines my feelings for our school and the people that make up our community.

I’m thankful for the brilliant teachers and the supportive, hilarious classmates who shaped me during my four years as a student. I’m indebted to the generous and devoted colleagues who made my time on the faculty so wonderful. I’m grateful to the hundreds of Regians I’ve taught who have made working as an Ignatian educator so fulfilling.

Most of all, I continue to marvel in appreciation for the generosity of our community. There is a reason that no equivalent to Regis exists. Our financial model defies logic and convention. The unprecedented generosity of our alumni, parents, and friends allows the school to continue to provide a world-class education and life-changing Catholic formation without charging any tuition.

This Annual Report documents gifts made to Regis during the fiscal year that ran from July 1, 2020 through June 30, 2021. Each contribution directly benefited our gifted students and allowed the school to cover the majority of its operating expenses. It was a remarkable year, and we remain humbled by your continued support of the Foundress’ vision for Regis.

I invite you to look closely at the long lists of supporters in these pages and the even more expansive donor rolls found online at regis.org/annualreport. All of these supporters – all of you – make it possible for the Regians of today and tomorrow to have the same eye-opening, life-changing experiences I encountered thanks to my parents’ prodding.

On behalf of all of our Men for Others, thank you for allowing the Regis miracle to continue.

“Grandma Julia” Honored with Deo et Patriae Award

On Tuesday, November 9, Mrs. Julia Stanzione GP’00 was honored with the 2021 Deo et Patriae Award. Affectionately known as “Grandma Julia,” she was recognized in front of family, alumni, and friends of Regis for her 25 years of devoted service to the Hearn Speech and Debate Society and the entire school.

Returning in-person after being held virtually in 2020, the 2021 Deo et Patriae Reception and Celebration took place at the New York Athletic Club to cheers and laughter for all who attended. Following food and drinks, the evening’s formal programming began with a singing of the Regis alma mater led by current seniors. After opening remarks from Vice President for Development James L. Kennedy ’02 and a prayer from Principal Fr. Anthony D. Andreassi, CO, Eric DiMichele, the Director of Admissions and longtime moderator of the Hearn, introduced Grandma Julia as this year’s honoree.

“No one is more tenacious, disciplined, organized, passionate, and loving than Grandma Julia. The success of the Hearn—and, be clear about this—is directly attributable to her extraordinary efforts over the last 26 years, especially so over the last two years of this rather grim pandemic, where she’s been downright heroic,” DiMichele said. “You know, in a world of doubt, equivocation, polarization, depression, and moral collapse, there is one constant, and that is you, Grandma Julia.”

Grandma Julia’s contributions to Regis began in 1996, when her grandson Richard Rivero ’00 asked if she would be able to volunteer some time to support the Hearn. Very soon, Grandma Julia assumed a leading role, recruiting volunteer judges, overseeing logistics, and attending weekend tournaments. She continued to do this gracious work for 25 years, often volunteering for Regis up to 30 hours per week, all while working as an administrator for a tutoring service. Grandma Julia has supported the successful running of over 1,100 speech and debate tournaments, and outside the Hearn has offered her assistance yearly to Regis’ Open House, Interview Day, and other important events.

Before concluding remarks from Interim President Christian Talbot ’93, Grandma Julia took to the stage to accept her award. “I’m overcome, so emotionally overcome by the outpouring of love I feel in this room, and from the bottom of my heart, believe me, it is sincerely reciprocated, much, much more than you will ever imagine,” Grandma Julia said. “This is a night that will remain indelible in my mind and in my heart, so along with my love, and warmest hugs, I thank you a gazillion times over for this incredible honor.”

First held in 1981, the Deo et Patriae Reception & Celebration recognizes generous supporters of Regis High School who have given to the Annual Fund at the Order of the Owl level or greater during the previous fiscal year. The night’s award is presented to a person who has served Regis and the community in a distinguished capacity during the course of their life. Grandma Julia becomes the third woman in Regis history to earn the illustrious honor.

“Those four things—being optimistic, being a Person for Others, being super smart, being collaborative rather than competitive—that to me defines the best of what Regis is about,” Talbot said, praising Grandma Julia. “And, I don’t think it’s an exaggeration to say that if you know Julia, you have been part of a long line of people whose lives she has changed one smile and one conversation at a time, over many, many, many years.”

A full recording of the 2021 Deo et Patriae Reception and Celebration and Grandma Julia’s remarks can be found at news.regis.org.

IGNATIAN SPIRITUALITY
The Fourth Day

A LIFE OF CHRISTIAN PIETY

By Scott Moringiello '97

Scott Moringiello '97 remembers friend and fellow Regian Gerald Russello '89, who passed away in November. This article originally appeared in Commonwealth Magazine.

“Gerald Russello.”

“Hi, Jerry, it’s Scott.”

“Scott! Great to hear from you. How is everything?”

That’s how most of our phone conversations began. I was one of the people in Jerry Russello’s life who knew him as Jerry, the guy from Regis—not Gerald, the well-respected securities lawyer, the editor of the University Bookman, the writer whose prose graced many and various publications.

I must have been fifteen when I met Jerry. Along with some Regis classmates, I had started a Catholic reading group under the tutelage of the great John L. Connelly '56, a legendary teacher who formed the lives of countless Regians, from Fr. Robert Imbelli '56 (his classmate) to novelist Phil Klay '01. With the kind of braggadocio not uncommon among Regis students, we fancied ourselves Catholic intellectuals, and asked Mr. Connelly if there were any heirs today to the authors we were reading. Who was engaged in writing about and therefore preserving a compelling vision of the Catholic intellectual tradition and Catholic culture? Mr. Connelly told us that we’d get to meet such a person the following week at our regular meeting time—8:00 am on Wednesdays, an hour before classes began—when we gathered to discuss Evelyn Waugh and Etienne Gilson and John Paul II and all the rest.

Twenty-seven years later I still have a vivid memory of Jerry walking through Mr. Connelly’s classroom door in his suit, holding his briefcase, thanking Mr. Connelly for inviting him, and assuring him that he was in no rush—the judge he was clerking for knew he’d be coming in closer to 9:30 than 9:00. (With all he did, was Jerry ever in a rush? Did he ever not have time for you?) I confess that I don’t remember much more about that day, but I know that we asked Jerry how he got started as a writer. His advice was simple: writing and exploring ideas should be exciting. Send something to a magazine and see what happens. You’ll probably get rejected, but you’ll also probably learn something. Do this again and again, reading as much as you can along the way, until you get published.

That first encounter with Jerry made a lasting impression on me. We all need role models, and that day I found one of mine. But if Jerry had just been someone who dispensed good advice, I don’t think there would have been such an outpouring of grief and so many beautiful tributes after his death. Jerry’s life was much more attractive than that.

On the facade of Regis there is an inscription that reads Deo et Patriae Pietas Christiana Exerit: Christian piety built this for God and country. During both of our times at Regis, Jerry and I heard a great deal about our charge to become “men for others,” a goal that Fr. Pedro Arrupe, SJ, the former Superior General of the Society of Jesus, set out for all graduates of Jesuit schools. Jerry took those words to heart. He truly lived a life of service to others, in service to God and to his country.

Jerry’s greatest gift to me, though, was the way he embodied pietas Christiana—Christian piety. “Piety,” unfortunately, often calls to mind images of “simple” believers or uncritical religious naiveté. But piety is really an approach to life, a virtue that practices being grateful. It reminds us that we ought to be thankful to God for our country, for our family, for our friends—even for our high school. That gratitude, in turn, shapes our encounters with those around us. True piety doesn’t have time for grudges; instead, like the agape for which it is most grateful, true piety “bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things” (1 Cor. 13:7). True piety never draws attention to itself, and Jerry certainly never drew attention to himself. Those who knew where to look, however, could see the piety with which he approached education, ideas, family, and God.

Jerry would be quick to tell you that piety was a Roman virtue as much as a Christian one. He learned about piety from the Aeneid and from the Bible. And he was always learning. A few years ago, six or so of us got together for dinner with Mr. Connelly, as we did about once a year. One friend had just completed a doctorate on Spinoza, another had completed a residency in psychiatry, a third was working in consulting. As we went around the table updating each other about our lives, Jerry, typically, asked the most questions. He had a knack for being genuinely curious and genuinely affirming. He was proud of all of us, in the way an older brother looks with pride on his younger brothers’ accomplishments.

Jerry supported Regis and other educational endeavors because he believed they were places where students could ask enduring questions and cultivate abiding friendships. This is also what he saw in the Russell Kirk Center, the Intercollegiate Studies Institute, and the Lumen Christi Institute. His education—after Regis, he received a degree in Classics from Georgetown and graduated from NYU’s law school—taught him what was worth studying, and his piety reminded him he didn’t have all the answers. Jerry deeply believed that ancient Greek and Latin texts could help us encounter the permanent things, but he didn’t love them just because they stood as a bulwark against the latest educational fad; he loved them because of the joy he found in getting together with friends—as we did—to read them.

Most people knew Jerry through his careers as an attorney and as the editor of the University Bookman. I can’t speak to the intricacies of his work as a lawyer (I'm blissfully ignorant of securities law), but I can attest to the way he brought his piety to legal questions. Even in the rarified world of corporate law, Jerry always had an eye on what specific laws meant to people's lives, and how the practice of law affected lawyers themselves. His legal practice was important, but it was not the most important part of his life. He understood that, while laws could help bring order to people's lives, the goal of life wasn't order. The goal of life was love.

The kinds of thinkers Jerry admired displayed the same kind of piety in their writing that he exemplified in his life. Orestes Brownson, Christopher Dawson, Russell Kirk, and Roger Scruton could all be classified as "conservative" thinkers, but Jerry wasn't interested in their labels. He saw them as writers who took serious questions seriously. They were concerned about what human beings owed each other and how history and culture shape us. Jerry edited a book of Dawson's writings (Christianity and European Culture) and wrote an excellent book on Russell Kirk (The Postmodern Imagination of Russell Kirk). In those books, Jerry showed that these two thinkers were still vital for understanding contemporary life. He also wrote introductions for reissued texts of Brownson and Dawson. All these writers remained essential because they raised the most important question: How can we be faithful? Or rather, how can we be pious? They didn't answer this or any other question for you, nor would Jerry presume to do that. But they offered models, pictures of what a life well-lived looked like.

I honestly don't know how Jerry kept up with editing the University Bookman, published by the Russell Kirk Center. Every week, a new essay would appear reviewing a book about history or politics or culture. Jerry was always actively seeking out new reviewers, and he had a special gift for nurturing young writers. He had a light touch with his editing, and he always made your work better, often in ways that you couldn't quite foresee. Most importantly, though, working with Jerry was fun. It was clear that he enjoyed editorial work, but more than that he enjoyed the friendships that came with editing the Bookman. Under the @ubookman handle on Twitter, Jerry brought these qualities with him to the usually depressing world of social media. Even there, he managed to show his bonhomie, and he never failed to see the best in others and engage in actual conversations.

Part of what drew Jerry to Russell Kirk, I'm certain, was Kirk's piety toward place. Jerry had a wonderfully expansive notion of community, and the republic of letters of which Jerry was such an active citizen knew no physical boundaries. Jerry would want to remind us, however, not to forget that we are individuals from particular families who grew up in specific places. Like Jerry, I'm an Italian-American kid from Brooklyn (although my mom's family is Irish, and we moved to Long Island when I was six). Perhaps Jerry's most important lesson to me was that our grandparents—their traditions, their love of family, and yes, their piety—possessed a wisdom that our fancy degrees and "connections" could only hope to emulate. Our educations were valuable insofar as they helped us deepen our love for where we came from and for those who raised us. Sure, Washington D.C. or Oxford or Chicago or Wall Street are great. Have you ever visited Mill Basin or Bay Ridge in Brooklyn, though? You can read about filial piety when you read about Aeneas carrying Anchises, but you can actually experience it every Sunday over dinner at your grandparents while watching the Mets. These places and these people opened up our worlds. Our task was to share what we learned. I just wish I had more time to learn from Jerry.

I especially wish I had more time to learn about parenting from Jerry. He was always interested to know about my students because he always wanted to learn what sorts of questions his own children might raise. He cared deeply about passing on the faith to them. I loved getting updates on their lives, and Jerry relished his role as a father. In my sadness hearing about his death, I was heartened to know that when he died, he was surrounded by his beloved wife, his children, and his sister.

Each morning at prayer, I recite a litany of family and friends who have died. Jerry, of course, is now part of that somber list. As I say his name, I don't worry that Jerry needs to be freed from the temporary torments of purgatory. (I'm sure Dante has already Vergiled this son of Mill Basin up that particular mountain.) Instead, in mentioning Jerry I ask God to allow me to practice the piety that Jerry lived because I want to be conformed to the Love that Jerry now encounters. Oremus pro invicem, my friend, that I may see you again.

"During both of our times at Regis, Jerry and I heard a great deal about our charge to become "men for others," a goal that Fr. Pedro Arrupe, SJ, the former Superior General of the Society of Jesus, set out for all graduates of Jesuit schools. Jerry took those words to heart. He truly lived a life of service to others, in service to God and to his country."

Rev. Christopher J. Devron, SJ, Named 25th President of Regis High School

The Regis High School Board of Trustees on Tuesday, January 25, 2022 unanimously voted to appoint Rev. Christopher J. Devron, SJ, as the next president of Regis High School. Following a national search that attracted a wide range of qualified and experienced candidates, and a rigorous process that included input from hundreds of members of the Regis community, the school's presidential search committee enthusiastically recommended Fr. Devron, who will begin his term as the 25th President in the school's proud history in the summer of 2022.

"We are so pleased to welcome Fr. Devron back to Regis as the school's next president," said Marty Mannion '77, who chaired the presidential search committee and announced the news of Fr. Devron's appointment in a joint letter to the Regis community with Board Chair Tony DiNovi '80. "He brings nine years of directly relevant experience as the president of Fordham Prep, which gives him familiarity with Regis' opportunities and challenges. As the founding director of the REACH Program, Fr. Devron also has strong connectivity to Regis and our mission as well as outstanding pastoral leadership skills."

Fr. Devron brings with him 16 years of highly successful experience shepherding Jesuit high schools. He is currently in his ninth year as President of Fordham Preparatory School, where he has overseen a period of dynamic growth. Prior to Fordham Prep, Fr. Devron was the founding president of Christ the King Jesuit College Prep, a Cristo Rey high school on the West Side of Chicago focused on providing a quality Catholic education for families that otherwise could not afford private school.

Of course, Fr. Devron already is well known and highly respected within the Regis community. In addition to the vision and leadership he provided the REACH Program from 2001 through 2006, he also served as a valued friend and mentor to many students and faculty and staff members alike. In the years since, he has remained close with the school, serving on the Board of Trustees from 2014 to 2020.

"I am profoundly humbled and honored to be selected by the Regis board for this role. This is not simply because Regis holds an iconic status in the world of Jesuit education, which it does. Being selected as Regis' next president taps into a deep reservoir of cherished memories and vocational graces," Fr. Devron said. "In 2001, I came to Regis, in my first assignment as a Jesuit priest, as a classroom teacher, campus minister, and founding director of the REACH program. I am thrilled to return to 84th street to serve this special community of students, faculty, administrators, and alumni."

Fr. Devron grew up in Palatine, Illinois and graduated in 1989 from the University of Notre Dame, where he majored in philosophy and government. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1991 and was ordained to the priesthood in 2001. Fr. Devron holds a Master's in Philosophy from Loyola University Chicago as well as a Master's in Divinity from the Weston Jesuit School of Theology. He also earned a Master's in Theology in African American spirituality through coursework at the Harvard Divinity School and the Institute for Black Catholic Studies at Xavier University in New Orleans.

A more in-depth feature story on Fr. Devron will appear in the next issue of this magazine.

Language Teacher Arianna Huergo Wins University of Chicago Educator Award

In September, Regis Language teacher Ms. Arianna Huergo was recognized by the University of Chicago with their annual Outstanding Educator Award. Established over three decades ago, the award is given out to educators across the country who exemplify excellence in teaching, love of learning, and a care for students inside and outside the classroom.

"I felt very humbled by this recognition, and I still cannot believe it," said Huergo. "Sometimes we don't realize the big impact that we have on our students. We have the tools to change a person's life, and that is why our profession is so important."

Each year, the incoming class at the University of Chicago is asked to nominate for this award educators they believe have been impactful in their intellectual and personal growth. Huergo was nominated by recent graduate Xavier Rousseau '21, whom she taught for Chinese II, III, and IV.

"Arianna is an outstanding teacher," shared Chair of the Language Department Mr. David Bonagura '99. "Her classes are engaging and thorough. She constantly employs creative methods so her students can develop their language skills. And she regularly takes time to meet with students one-on-one to help them progress. Regis is blessed to have her as both a Chinese and Spanish teacher."

Huergo, who also teaches Spanish I and serves as a Junior advisor, received a formal letter of recognition announcing her receipt of the prestigious award. Additionally, Huergo was awarded several gifts, including a certificate, award plaque, UChicago shirt, and Staples gift card.

"I feel honored and definitely very happy," remarked Huergo on receiving the award. "It made me really see the big influence that we have in our students, how we can change their future. Teaching is a very rewarding career. Seeing your students succeed is seeing your own success."

Regis Honors Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

On Wednesday, January 26, the Regis community participated in a prayer service celebrating the life and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Students, faculty, and staff reflected on the principles of the late civil rights leader, coming together to continue advocating for justice and a more accepting and loving society.

The service was held in the Chapel of the Sacred Heart and live-streamed for students to watch from their advisement locations. Following introductory remarks from Director of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Ms. Belkise Dallam, Dean Rosamilia '23 and George Cheung '23 led the community through an opening prayer and invitational respectively. Alexander Cohen '24 and Charles Mango '25 then offered a scriptural reading from Exodus, which was reflected upon by Johnathan Bernadeau '23.

"I doubt many of us here believe that our actions could be as momentous as that of any legendary figure. Regardless, we are called to march that righteous path," said Bernadeau. "Our individual works are not meant to be seen as separate from God's greater plan. No matter how little we are able to see that, we march forward. It does not matter if you feel small. It does not matter if the situation seems unchangeable. We believe that as Catholics, as Regians, no matter what, we march."

After Bernadeau's remarks, Thomas Fuller '25 and Director of Mission and Identity Fr. James P. Ferus, SJ offered petitions, and Cohen and Dominick Facchini '24 led students through a reflection on the words and teachings of Dr. King. College Guidance Counselor Mr. Christopher Febles and Mango concluded the morning's service with closing thoughts and prayers.

"The path of the Noble Heart, the Man or Woman for Others, does indeed lead to a Promised Land, a world with justice for all, where our children and families are cared for, where we are safe and accepted for who we are," said Febles. "It's a wild, far-off, nearly impossible dream, I know. But hope, and the knowledge that I have my brothers and sisters with me, has kept me going this far. And I'll do my best to keep moving on that path, no matter the odds. And I ask you to be that supportive, hopeful, caring person we know you can be, the kind of person who can look a friend in the eye in his or her darkest hour and say, 'I am with you.'"

Regis Community “Braves the Shave” To Support Childhood Cancer Research

On Thursday, January 20, students, faculty, and staff “braved the shave” for the 12th Annual St. Baldrick’s Day. Held virtually last year, the event brought the Regis community together in the auditorium to shave their heads and stand in solidarity with children impacted by cancer.

First conceptualized in 1999, The St. Baldrick’s Foundation is a volunteer-driven charity focused on funding the research needed to cure childhood cancers and ensure these survivors can continue to live healthy lives. Around the world, roughly 300,000 children are diagnosed with cancer annually, and in the United States, children die of cancer more than any other disease.

As hair loss is a common side effect of cancer treatment, becoming a “shavee” offers one way of showing support for those suffering with the disease, and stands as a way of inspiring others to fund and support ongoing research.

St. Baldrick’s Day at Regis is sponsored by Catalyst, Regis’ Christian Service Club, and this year’s event was organized by Sebastian Cardena ’22, who has voluntarily shaved his head annually since his freshman year. The Regis community successfully raised $24,000 for childhood cancer research. Those who “braved the shave,” which included the entire Varsity Baseball team, were met with wide praise, and helped to spread continued awareness about the effects of childhood cancer.

Regions March for Life in Nation’s Capital

On Friday, January 21, a contingent of 24 Regions and faculty traveled to Washington, D.C. to participate in the 49th annual March for Life. Accompanied by students from St. Vincent Ferrer High School and the Convent of the Sacred Heart, the group joined 150,000 others to advocate for the right to life for all human beings.

Prior to departing to the nation’s capital, the group celebrated Mass at Regis with History teacher Fr. Arthur C. Bender, SJ ’67. Once in D.C, students heard from a variety of speakers, later marching down Constitution Avenue to the Supreme Court building. While it was only 25° F, everyone remained warm and cheerful, filled with enthusiasm in their common witness in defense of the most vulnerable.

“Though we are there to protest an injustice, the positive energy of the marchers, some of whom sing and play music along the route, reminds everyone that all life is to be cherished and celebrated,” said Mr. David Bonagura ’99, Chair of the Language Department and Moderator of Amate Vitam, Regis’ pro-life club. Ms. Consuelo Tate of the Language Department and Ms. Teresa Moriarty of the English Department also joined the group of Regions on the trip.

Regis Delegation Attends 2021 Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice

On Friday, November 5, Regis High School sent a delegation of students, faculty, staff, and alumni to Washington, DC. to participate in the 2021 Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice. Organized by the Ignatian Solidarity Network and grounded in the Jesuit faith and tradition, the three-day conference brought together high school and college students, church leaders, and educators from across the Jesuit network to reflect on pertinent social justice issues and discuss opportunities to create a more just world.

The first in-person gathering since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, this year’s conference brought together over 1,000 attendees from around the world to engage in important dialogues around faith, advocacy, and solidarity. Regis’ delegation, led by Campus Ministry and the Heritage Club, was the largest in attendance, composed of 23 sophomores, juniors, and seniors, four faculty and staff, and five alumni.

The theme of this year’s Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice was “Imagining a Path Forward: Reflection. Reckoning. Kinship.” Through a series of panel discussions and small group sessions, the conference challenged attendees to reflect on the devastating impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the crises it exacerbated, reckon with the responsibility had as Catholics to promote change, and develop a deeper kinship with vulnerable populations so that all can flourish in God’s Kingdom.

“It felt amazing to return to IFTJ after last attending in-person in 2019,” said Director of Social Justice Initiatives Mr. Marselys Lucero. “Students were able to listen to a variety of speakers on different topics and issues, tapping into interests and passions. The hope is that students will become more engaged and involved in these issues as they continue their studies at Regis and transition into their collegiate and professional careers.”

Several civic, educational, and religious leaders guided the weekend-long event, including author Fr. James Martin, SJ, Executive Director of U.S. Climate Action Network Keya Chatterjee, racial justice scholar Fr. Bryan Massingale, and Founder of Homeboy Industries Fr. Greg Boyle, SJ. Additionally, students Sebastian Huerta ’22 and Brian Mhando ’22 had the opportunity to speak at the conference, presenting on the importance of having intergenerational conversations around issues of race, identity, and equity.

“Being able to attend IFTJ after a year of remote school and a lack of school events was a great experience,” said Huerta. “As a presenter and a participant, I was able to engage with key issues of social justice outside of school, with people from around the country. Even apart from that, the experience was fun, and I got to know people from the Regis community better.”

Regions Organize Rikers Island Supply Drive

During the month of October, Regions Will Liao ’22 and Francesco Agnello ’24, along with the support of Director of Social Justice Initiatives Mr. Marselys Lucero, organized a schoolwide supply drive for formerly incarcerated individuals pursuing higher education. Previously detained at Rikers Island, the scholars now reside at the Ignacio House of Studies in the Bronx, and the drive helped provide much needed clothing, toiletries, and food to these students as they continue their scholastic pursuits.

When asked what motivated him to pursue the supply drive at Regis, Liao reflected on his close experiences with people impacted by the prison system. “My friend Dante spent 3½ years in Attica for gun possession – but this isn’t the only thing that defines him. He’s also a regular customer at my parents’ health food store, a son, a dad, and the person who taught me everything I know about protein supplements since he’s an avid weightlifter like me,” shared Liao. “The residents of Ignacio House likewise aren’t defined solely by why they went to jail but also by their goals and dreams as returning citizens.”

The Ignacio House of Studies is overseen by Thrive for Life, a non-profit organization providing educational, professional, and spiritual resources to incarcerated and formerly incarcerated persons in New York and New Jersey. Guided by the Jesuit tradition and the Universal Apostolic Preference of “Walking with the Excluded,” Thrive for Life is rooted in creating a network of support for those at the margins of society, easing their transitions out of prison and giving them the tools needed to find success and independence.

“Student leadership and empowerment is one of the goals of Campus Ministry, so I was thrilled that Will and Francesco took over this initiative,” said Lucero. “Not only were Will and Francesco instrumental, but another Regian, alum Vincenzo Guido ’16, has been involved with Thrive for Life for the past few years and brought the potential of a supply drive to my attention. I think all three of them are a testament to what we expect at Regis, both while attending and after graduation.”

Regis’s partnership with and service to Rikers Island has extended beyond this year’s supply drive. Five years ago, Principal Fr. Anthony D. Andreassi, CO formed Regis at Rikers, which prior to the pandemic brought Regis juniors and seniors annually to the prison to meet with inmates. Students over the years have been able to participate in conversations and competitive sports at Rikers, allowing them to develop solidarity with the incarcerated and begin advocating for just reforms to the prison system.

“I led this drive in hopes that it will ultimately lead to a supper-book club where the Ignacio and Regis communities can exchange stories,” said Liao. “Dante reinforced a key lesson Regis taught me – we become better people when we listen to everyone with an open mind.”

Alumni Share Work and Life Advice With Seniors on Career Day

On Wednesday, October 13, Regis invited alumni from a variety of industries to participate in the school's annual Career Day with the Senior class. Conducted over Zoom, the program offered students the opportunity to discern their career interests and learn valuable advice from leaders across their respective fields.

The morning's events commenced with a keynote address delivered by Michael Moro '96, CEO of Genesis, a leader in institutional digital asset markets. "Life is hard out there. And things won't just be handed to you; you will have to work for what you want. But what you will all have is the phenomenal foundation that is Regis," said Moro. "It may not be apparent to you now, but I truly believe that the gift that is this school will continue to pay dividends for the rest of your lives, oftentimes in unexpected moments. I look forward to your continued success, and the contributions that you will all be making down the road."

Following the opening remarks, seniors attended two career panels of their choosing. Seven panels representing Entrepreneurship, Finance, Healthcare, Journalism, Law, Service, and Technology were made available to students, allowing them a wide assortment of career opportunities to hear perspectives from.

The Development Office and the Class of 2022 are thankful to the following alumni panelists for taking time out of their schedules to share career insights with our seniors and further support the Regis mission:

Matching Gift Companies

Matching gifts are a great way to increase the impact of a gift by taking advantage of an employer's match employee charitable contributions. Some companies even double or triple the amount of their employee's gift!

Check with your company's benefits department to see if Regis is eligible for a matching gift or contact the Development Office at giving@regis.org or (212) 288-1142 for assistance.

Our prayerful condolences to Michael Hayes, whose wife, Mary Anne, passed away peacefully at home on July 16, 2021, surrounded by loving family. Mike writes: "My wonderful wife and best friend of 59 years was a Navy Nurse when we married. So, on September 29, 2021, Lieutenant Mary Anne Catherine Hayes, USN, was buried, with Military Honors, in Arlington National Cemetery, Section 81, Grave 916. R.I.P." From Al Kenneke. "I attended the funeral Mass of Mike Hayes's wife, Mary Anne. It was a well-attended, wonderful Mass. The pastor addressed the grandkids and asked how each would sum up their grandmother. Of course, each uniquely reflected the love and admiration held for her. But what most impressed me was the pastor quoting Mike as saying, 'Mary Anne never met a person she didn't change.' Such a perfect sum-up of a person's life!" Ed Kelly is moving: "With a bit of sadness and a wisp of nostalgia, but with fond memories and high expectations, Kathy and I will be moving to Shepherdstown, W. Va., in mid-November. I have lived in D.C. and Alexandria since January 1972. In 2014, we had purchased what was intended as our retirement home. We will be moving from a two-bedroom house to a four-bedroom on a lot more than twice the size of our current one. Many of you know the importance of classical music to Kathy and myself. We hope to find a mix of classical music performances in the Shepherdstown area. I currently serve on the Board of a northern Virginia regional musical organization that provides five or six concerts a season. I also serve on the Board of the Friends of Music at the School of Music at George Mason University. Kathy and I will miss greatly our association with our parish church. When I remarried after Mary's death, I moved from the Jesuit Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown to Blessed Sacrament in Alexandria. I will miss the Men's Group there with its speakers and small-group discussions. Kathy and I will mostly miss the weekly Bible Study Group, taught by a brilliant theologian, Fr. Mark Carrier, who knows Latin, Greek, Hebrew, as well as some Aramaic, and who provides background and context of a particular reading, including pointing out mistranslations that can change the meaning of some passages." Harry De Maio happily reports: "Got our Pfizer booster shots. The Octavius epic moves on. Book 15 will be released in November. Books 16 and 17 are due out early 2022. Sherlock Holmes and the Glamorous Ghost comes out this December." John Amabile writes: "In the Summer Prowlings, I came across an entry by Paula Neira '81. Paula may be the first woman to graduate from Regis. She then graduated from the Naval Academy and, sometime later recognized that her gender did not align with the gender that she was assigned at birth. As a transgender person, she has been extraordinarily successful in her chosen professions (Navy, nurse, lawyer), to the extent that the Secretary of the Navy has made her a co-sponsor (together with a U.S. senator) of an about-to-be christened ship." Jack Magan remembers: "In 1965, I joined ABC Television in sports sales, and was having lunch at Toots Shor's with Rocky Marciano, a decade retired as World Heavyweight Champion. Suddenly he uttered, 'Oh, [expletive]! There's Frank Costello. He'll want to meet with me.' Two minutes later, the maître d' approached our table. 'Mr. Marciano, Mr. Costello would like to see you, if you would.' Rocky emitted another 'Oh, [expletive]!' He felt everyone in the place would think he and Costello were in cahoots. I recommended, 'Hustle over there and show him the deference he's due as America's most notorious killer.' Rocky failed to see my humor, but visited with the Mafia chieftain, and was back, greatly relieved. All Costello wanted to do was thank him for what he'd done throughout his career for the image of Italian-Americans. During the meal, when I asked about the most unusual thing that ever happened to him during a fight, I was rattled by Marciano's response: During his 1953 Roland La Starza fight at the Polo Grounds, as he was breaking the blood vessels in La Starza's arms in a barbaric assault that sports fans still talk about, he heard a female Italian-accented voice at ringside, bellowing, 'An-iii-mal! An-iii-mal!' When he glanced down, he was startled to see his mother, who had never before attended one of his fights—and would never attend another." October 3, 2021 was the 70th anniversary of the famous "Shot Heard Round the World" (viz. Emerson's "Concord Hymn" and DeLillo's Underworld), Bobby Thomson's home run. Here are some vivid memories from 10/3/51. John Donohue: "I left school and took the subway to the Westchester Square station. Walking down the stairs to the street, I heard a roar of voices. Bobby Thomson had hit his miracle home run, and I had missed it. But being a Bronx boy, I was a Yankees fan, and it did not hurt that much." Lee Sculti: "I was a Dodger fan, and my older sister, Margaret, had earlier dated Ralph Branca, so at our house, the most we felt was deep sympathy for Poor Ralph. Now I'm reading The Wright Brothers. There's a whole lot more to the story than we had time for in history class—a worthwhile read." Bill Sullivan: "We were in the old gym practicing with the basketball teams, when someone came in from the far end screaming that Thomson had just hit a home run. Although a Yankee fan, I was the only one in my neighborhood who was not a Dodger fan, so it was a great day." John Amabile: "I can still hear Russ Hodges's call, 'The Giants win the pennant!' The joy in my heart—God heard my prayers! Could it be that Leo was really being rewarded for being a 'nice' guy, despite all the contrary evidence? Had to be, for why else did the Deity intervene on his behalf? It was a wonderful experience, fondly remembered by all of us aged Baseball Giant fans these many decades later!" Tom O'Toole: "I don't recall where I was for the 'Shot.' But I have a clear and different memory of Bobby Thomson. After a game at the Polo Grounds when I was maybe

12–13 years old, some of us waited outside for player autographs. Bobby Thomson emerged, probably new to the Giants, and was surrounded. He joked, saying he was not a famous player and why would we want his autograph. As he signed, he was not hurried and continued bantering with us. My recollection is of how very gracious and nice a guy he was." Al Kenneke: "I recall staying after school and gathering in the back area of the cafeteria at those stand-up green eating counters. Someone had brought a radio. We were roughly split between Giant and Dodger fans. Like the other Bums fans, I was devastated by that fateful Branca–Thomson moment. Years later, my kids loved to rib me by playing the recording of the Giants' announcer yelling over and over, 'The Giants win the pennant!'" Bob Maresca: "Being an avid Dodger fan, I stayed at Regis following some of the game until I had to get home to deliver my Brooklyn Eagle paper route, satisfied that the Dodgers were winning. But as I was transferring trains, I heard a loud roar and a warning to the Dodger fans not to jump on the tracks. It was a sad ride back home that day." Bob Baron: "On that special day, I got home by the 7th inning. My mother was ironing, and we listened to the radio together. We had no TV. When Bobby Thomason got his hit, we both screamed and danced around the room. Willie Mays was on deck but not needed. In the 1980s, I started collecting autographed baseballs, and I have one signed by both Ralph Branca and Bobby Thomson. I will bring it to our 70th anniversary next year." Larry Boland: "I was a Dodger fan, born in Flatbush, raised in the Bronx. I remember kneeling in front of our TV set, praying for the Bums in that final inning. Brooklyn seemed to be coasting to a playoff win, but we knew it's not over 'till the Fat Lady sings.' Those short-left field and right-field foul poles (279'/258') at the Polo Grounds could make a team 'lucky' at any time. Leo Durocher, then the Giants Manager, had famously said 'You take the good team and I'll take the lucky team.' Leo must have had a vision of Bobby Thomson stepping in again against Ralph Branca. Thomson had homered against Branca earlier in the week. Branca grooved a fastball, (Red Barber said it was a curve) and as soon as Thomson hit it, I thought of that short-left field wall. Gulp! The 'shot' fell into that close-in lower deck instead of Andy Pafko's glove. Oh well, wait till next year!"

Once again we begin with the sad news that we've lost another classmate: after a valiant battle, Bob Golden lost his struggle against a very aggressive brain tumor. Although we have no additional information regarding Bob's last days, several of us had been in touch with him prior to his surgery and found him optimistic even in the face of the struggle he faced. Throughout the years, Bob was certainly one of the most loyal sons of Regis, rarely passing up an opportunity to be with his classmates or to honor his alma mater. No matter the event, one could always be certain that Bob would be there. Requiescat in pace dear friend. Jim Shea's wife, Phyllis, reports further on the success of their son Jimmy's book: "When I wrote to you, the book had sold 500 copies.... now over 2,000 have been sold. A tribute to Jimmy's astute marketing. A cyclist who owns a Subaru wrote to Subaru in praise of the car's ability to handle her bicycle. She mentioned Jimmy's book and how much she enjoyed it. The car company printed her review in its quarterly magazine and sales of the book jumped. The family is still having lots of fun following its first author." Jim Whelan reports that "all is well and that Sally-Ann is looking forward to a new left hip before Christmas." (Funny, when we were younger, just two front teeth would have sufficed.) Jim followed up with the great news that their son, Tim, "had been granted tenure at the Medical University of South Carolina. He directs the lung transplant program there." Tom Hickey recently became the proud possessor of a pacemaker. So far so good on that front. Tom's granddaughter Caitlyn, just added an MBA from Villanova to his grandkids' collection of graduate degrees: one Harvard MBA, a Stanford MBA arriving next Spring, a CPA from Delaware, and an ME in Biomechanical Engineering courtesy of Stevens Institute. If you should change any of your contact info, please update your entry in the Regis alumni directory and let me know via email or text message.

Jack Conroy, jmconroy1@aol.com

Dick Ward has come up with a new approach to Prowlings: "Since the pandemic struck, I'm a little short on news. So I thought I'd impose on my brothers of '54 with some minor trivia: 1) Does anyone remember Francis Toners' (2nd year geometry) assignment over the Christmas break? What did each of us have to analyze and what was the method of analysis? 2) On the first day at Regis, did Fr. McEvoy (Black Jack) in his introductory talk say, "Regis is like a hotel, people come and people go." (Ed. note - Dick meant Father Byrne.) 3) When did Regis stop taking a boat ride to the amusement park in Rye for the annual outing and why?" Our most faithful correspondent, Tom Finnegan, reports: "Alas, I will miss JUG Night this year, on doctor's orders. I'm also going to miss my grandson's wedding next week for the same reason. He's keeping me away from crowds. I hope all who show up for JUG Night have a great visit. I would ask you all to continue to pray for my granddaughter who has been suffering from PTS syndrome since the shooting at her high school three and a half years ago. The stress has destroyed her immune system and left her open to any and all infections that come her way. She has surgeries several times a month to open her airways. Nonetheless she has started college at FSU, and seems to be keeping up with her classes, although virtually." Another reluctant absentee from JUG Night, Lou Luceri, explains, "Sorry I couldn't make it to JUG Night this year! Two trips to the hospital to try and clear up a viral-infected hematoma after a fall on my butt that was to blame while we were visiting six of our grandchildren in NC. I don't know what is more of a pain, the wound or the pump around my neck to clear it up. Glad to hear the price of beer hasn't gone up. Did anybody buy t-shirts? Prayers for my wife, Jo, please? She has entered the early stages of dementia. It's not easy for her nor the family, especially the grandkids." Attendance at JUG Night was sparse for our vintage but Bill Monahan did make it. Bill reports, "I saw Jim Foote '51 but '50s attendees were sparse. 'Where's Fauci? Where's Fauci?' No show but you could buy his T-shirt in the auditorium. The event is held in the courtyard under a white tent. Pitcher of beer is still $3. Come visit; Tom Cahill is in Watermark Suites and I'm 1/2 mile away in Heritage Village." Sam Milana is going through a rough patch but his spirits remain high: "Ave to all you noble hearts who are still ticking. You are all in my prayers & thoughts daily.....here is an update on this body.. it has gained ESP... NOT THE EXPECTED one but rather eating, sleeping & peeing.... the stroke has challenged my balance but we are gaining on that problem. Therapy is intensive. MY SPIRITS ARE HIGH. I solicit your prayers.... every day I think about a REGIS moment & I tear up like a schoolgirl...enough of my self-indulgence!!!! I hope you all are healthy, happy & well.. GOD BLESS YOU ALL.” Finally please keep Joe Sullivan and his family in your prayers. A classmate who wishes to remain anonymous requests prayers for a medical issue. Classmates are eager to hear what is going on in your lives so please keep in touch.

The year 2021 marked the 500th anniversary of the conversion of St. Ignatius of Loyola, which bookended the conversion of St. Paul of Tarsus on the road to Damascus. St. Paul christianized the world, while St. Ignatius educated it. Ignatius was a Basque. If you want something done properly and long-term, hire a Basque whose middle or last name is “Gravitas!” For some 500 years Jesuits have inspired their students and athletes to work, study, and play way over their heads, extracting from them the potential they never knew they had. At West Point they speak of the “Long Gray Line.” Re the Jesuits we should speak of the “Long Black Line.” The North American Indians spoke of the Jesuits as “the Black Robes,” referring to their black cassocks. How fondly and nostalgically do we remember the black-cassocked Jesuits who taught us at Regis: Tom Harvey, Tom Burke, Steve Duffy, Marty Neylon, Jim Carney ’43, Dave Carroll, William O’Leary, Ed Maly, Ned Dunn, and Jack Nelson. Their great apostolic dedication enlarged our vision and maturity, enabling us to see around corners and over the horizon. For some 500 years Jesuits have used sound pedagogy, Catholic theology and philosophy, ethics, sociology, natural law, and common sense, taking the long view. Add cura personalis, homo pro aliis, and Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam (AMDG). Jesuits would reject the flavor of the day or the flavor of the month, e.g. CRT, and opt for coming together, and not confrontation and devisiveness. Deo gratias! In the summer of 2021, John Githens (globetrotter extraordinaire) attended a family wedding at Aix-en-Provence in France. One of the great cities in southern France (north of Marseille) with great charm and a university. It has been called “the city with a thousand fountains.” Its most famous son is Paul Cezanne. To get to Aix, John had to carry his US vax card and had also had to be EU COVID-tested. John also traveled the Paris Metro, which he says has many staircases for changing trains! Great for les lyciens parisiens, but not for retired Russian translators and interpreters! John once met US Secretary of State, Anthony Blinken, when Tony was 15 years old. He met him at a friends’ get-together in Paris. Tony spoke fluent French, as did John thanks to his stellar French instruction at Regis under Pere Eugene Culhane, SJ, and Bob Clancy (who had the best French accent, basso profundo, west of Les Champs Elysees). John opines that Tony Blinken is so much younger than past Secretaries of State. Time will tell if age makes a difference!

Paul Lennon writes: “Our class celebrated 65 years since our graduation and it was a delightful experience. On Saturday evening we had a lovely dinner at a midtown restaurant selected by Ray McGuire with 18-20 classmates and 12 wives and widows. We never ran out of stories - surprise! On Sunday most of the group went to Regis to attend Mass in the chapel, concelebrated by Bob Imbelli and Pete Fink, and a few had this photo op later at the front door. We will be ready now to take on the world.”

John Hannaway attended the September 25 memorial Mass for Father Joseph O’Hare ’48 at Fordham University. “A very large congregation honored the long time Fordham President and major presence in the civic and political life of New York City. His status as a Regis alum and President was duly recognized by several of the speakers, including the homilist Father Pat Ryan. Pat’s homily captured the goodness of the man and excellence of his service, as well as his charm and wit and ability to relate to everyone he met.” After Mass, John spoke with Pat, thanking him for his homily and congratulating him for his recent article in Commonweal about his father’s role in the Irish war for independence in the 1920s. Art Mattei reports that he was struck down by a very rare and aggressive form of leukemia in the spring, but has been blessed with the best of care, with one doctor in Princeton and one at UPenn in Philadelphia, who work together. After eight weeks in the hospital, Art reports that things seem to be turning around. He says that the leukemia center at Penn is one of the world’s finest, and his attending physician is the top doctor there. He will appreciate all our prayers. Also in your prayers, please remember Bob Mazzella, who passed away in the spring. Bob taught in the New York City Public School system, and then was a tutor in Yorktown Heights until 2020. He was a grade school classmate of both Bob White, who notified us of his passing, and the late Gus Fruh. George Pepe wrote to say that the Romans would say to Bob “sit terra tibi levis,” roughly translated as “may the earth lie lightly on you,” a nice sentiment. We were also saddened to hear that Ted O’Neil’s wife Joan died in September. She was not only wife to Ted and mother to their children, but was also active in community environmental and open space preservation. Requiescat in pace. In June, your class correspondent played in the Alumni Golf Outing at the Pelham Country Club, along with Jim Power, John Lawler, ’51 and George Ruppel, ’71. We won’t report on our score, which won no prizes, but a fine time was had by all. Finally, six of the Class of ’57 got together for JUG Night in October: Bill Gillen, John Hannaway, Pat Ryan, Ed Sayre, Willie Werwaiss and I. The event was held in the quadrangle, due to COVID, on a perfect evening, 70 degrees and no wind. We caught up on one another’s status in life, and all agreed that we should have a 65th reunion next year. Stay tuned.

John Friia passed away on August 1. President of the Suffolk Classical Society, he was a consummate keeper of the classics flame, an inspiration to anyone who loved Latin, and a wonderful guy. Many of his emails to classmates were written in Latin. John also taught English and worked as an adjunct professor at Touro Law School and Stony Brook University. He was also a loyal attendee of JUG Night and of the 5-year reunions. We also lost John Palletta in 2020, but just found out about it recently. John had had a successful 35-year career as a statistician for the US Census Bureau. He was also a member of the Maryland Inter-Club Senior Golf Association. Besides golf, travel was another of his passions. Matt Hassett writes: “At the age of thirteen, I began commuting to Regis from Queens Village. We had students from all five boroughs of the city, Jersey, Connecticut, and Westchester County. A lot of us had long commutes. Mine was about 90 minutes each way, with additional time in the afternoon commuting to track practice. To find time to get homework done, I had to work on the subway - even reading while standing in a swaying crowded train. That experience is useful now. I can utilize my time on the stationary bike in our Fitness Center to read or study. People are impressed when they see me there pondering a math book while pedaling on the bike, and I say ‘just one more thing I got from Regis.’ I developed my brain/Reading Latin and Greek on a train./And that studying style/Has lasted a while./I’m eighty and at it again.” From Ron Mellor: “COVID fears caused Anne and me to cancel our trip with grandkids to Venice and Athens; instead we all frolicked with dolphins in San Diego.”

John Friia ’58, a distinguished teacher and beloved classmate, passed away on August 1.

Peter Burchyns writes: Leslie and I continue to live a quiet but contented retirement here in Palo Alto, regretful that foreign travel is difficult these days but pleased that our health is good and all is well with our children and grandchildren. Our oldest grandson Mike graduated with an Engineering and Environmental Science degree from Cornell last spring and is now serving as an officer in the Navy, preparing to ship out on his first tour of duty in the Pacific. The middle grandson is a sophomore at Davidson College majoring in Economics and the youngest is a junior in high school in San Diego, beginning to explore colleges that appeal to him. We will be home with close friends for Thanksgiving and possibly going to San Diego for Christmas with the rest of the extended family. Jim Bonnell writes: All quiet here; as I travelled through Orlando, Charlotte, Dallas, Corpus Christi, Philadelphia, and Syracuse, still no COVID questions, no temperature checks, no proof of vaccine!!! And now to visit PR a person needs proof of two doses: maybe that is why we are sending ventilators everywhere and have the lowest rates now, praise God, of any US state or territory. Dan O’Leary writes: My son, Dan, has three boys attending Tampa Jesuit. His middle son, Brian, was one of about 12 selected to represent the U.S. in the Juniors World Rowing Championship, recently held in Portugal. Brian and his rowing partner rowed away with the Bronze Medal in the Junior Double Sculls. He is hoping for a college scholarship or the U.S. Naval Academy. His older brother is looking at Georgetown. Just after the Prowlings deadline for the last issue, our classmate Peter Heinegg died in June of 2021 of a stroke at his home in Schenectady, NY. Peter had entered the Society of Jesus right after graduation from Regis, but left after seven years to complete his doctoral studies at Harvard. He went on to a career as an English teacher at Union College for 42 years, and was author of a dozen books and a translator of over 50 books. Two other classmates have died over the past year. Jack Godfrey died in August of 2020 in Broussard, LA, where he had retired. Jack too entered the Jesuits after graduation from Regis, but also left to ultimately earn a Ph.D. in Linguistics from Georgetown. He spent his entire career in research and development of Computer Voice Recognition and Speaker Recognition technology, to include leadership of the DOD’s Human Language Technology Group at the National Security Agency. In January 2021, Jack Boorman died at home in Washington, DC. Jack graduated from LeMoyné College and earned a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Southern California. He joined the International Monetary Fund in 1974, starting as an economist, and ultimately served as the IMF’s Director of the Strategy, Policy, and Review Department from 1990 to 2001. Jack retired from the Fund in 2002, and served from 2002 until 2019 on the Board of Trustees of Le Moyné College.

Henry Ricardo, odedude@yahoo.com

As reported in the last issue, Ken Bailie and his wife, Frances, perished on September 1, driving home from teaching at Iona College. They were caught up in the intense storm and flooding in Westchester due to Hurricane Ida. Ken came to Regis from St. Helena's in Parkchester. He thrived during his four years with us, garnering Honor Cards, heading the Math Club, translating the Iliad in the Homeric Academy, and perfecting his pool game in the smoke-filled Senior Room. As a Math major at Fordham, he continued to excel, taking part in undergraduate research and graduating Summa Cum Laude with Phi Beta Kappa honors. In the Fordham Jubilee booklet, marking the 50th anniversary of his graduation, Ken reminisced about "playing Password in the Campus Center as members of the N.Y. Giants football team rumbled through on their way to practice." The winner of a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship (among other awards), he did graduate work at NYU and at Fordham, where he received his M.A. degree and met his future wife, Frances LoCicero. Ken was an avid softball player at departmental picnics. His first position after Fordham was at Ladycliff College, as Chair of the Math department. After several years at Ladycliff, Ken joined IBM, where he worked for 39 years in various technical, management, and business positions. After completing her master's degree, Fran also worked for IBM and then moved to Iona College, where she succeeded at both teaching and administration, becoming chairperson of the Computer Science department. She earned a doctorate from Columbia and was noted for her ability to get Iona students internships and permanent employment at IBM and other prestigious companies. While at IBM, Ken aided in these efforts. In retirement, Ken taught CS at Iona with Fran. Ken and Fran were married for 53 years and had two children, Kathleen and Kevin, and four grandchildren—Courtney, Ryan, Bonnie, and Kevin. Ken's children graduated from Notre Dame, and he was a great fan of ND football, traveling to South Bend for one game a year. Appropriately, after researching his father's family, Ken applied for Irish citizenship, which was granted in 2013. Henry Ricardo was Best Man at Ken and Fran's wedding in 1968, later becoming godfather to Kevin. Ken was his daughter Cathy's godfather. The Ricardos and Bailies shared many milestone events—baptisms, first communions, confirmations, graduations.... Ken was Henry's first manager at IBM. Henry's wife, Catherine, encouraged Fran to teach at Iona and worked with her for 30 years. A memorial mass was held on October 23. Charlie Nastro, Jim Doran, Henry Ricardo, and Jerry Russo '95 (Director of Alumni Relations) were in attendance. In their eulogies, Kathleen and Kevin described their parents lovingly as exemplary spouses, parents, and grandparents. Kathleen spoke of the transformative effect of a Regis scholarship on her father, "something for which he was truly grateful his whole life." Requiescant in Pace.

Dave Eitelbach, deitelbach@gmail.com

Let's begin with a follow-up from the last RAN article. I mentioned in our last column that Tom Daley and I had been trying to find Dan Eramo. Well, Dan responded with this update. "I was truly impressed that Tom found an item from the 50th anniversary reunion of my Vietnam unit. That seems like, and is, ancient history. Then again, we just passed the 60th anniversary of graduating from Regis. You may have thought of me as MIA, but I assure you I look forward to reading the class updates in each Region. If my memory serves, Dave Eitelbach, Bill Eng, and I were the first three chairs in the middle row of class 1B. My wife Kay and I celebrated our 50th last October. We have seven granddaughters ranging in age from 32 years to two months. (That happens when you have 21 years between first and third child.) Number two granddaughter presented us with fourth great grandchild yesterday. I retired from USAF in 1988 and then spent 30 years as a contractor working for the Air Force. Got to travel a lot while on active duty and was able to keep that up as a contractor. Fully retired now. I have fond memories of riding the subway with Tom from 86th and Lexington to Queensborough Plaza where we parted ways many a day." Then, after a long silence, Bob Esposito checked in! "My life has overflowed with so many blessings that I have had only ounces of free time until now to maintain contact with high school and college friends.

'Bubbles' (do you remember my high school sweetheart?) and I have been married for 56 years and have joyfully raised eight wonderful children, four boys and four girls. Sadly, two are in heaven but my other children and most of my grandchildren continue to live here in the beautiful Berkshires. We now have 21 grandchildren (ages four to 32) and four great grandsons (under the age of five) and two more expected in 2022. I retired as a School Adjustment Counselor in the Pittsfield Public Schools after 35 years and as the Director of Religious Education for my parish after 40 years. I was ordained a Deacon in 2007 and cannot thank God enough for the joy of ministering at Baptisms and Weddings. Funerals, of course, are not enjoyable, but being able to support many parishioners and friends through their grieving has brought me closer to God. Bubbles and I still enjoy dancing and remember fondly the nighttime subway rides from the Bronx to Manhattan for the dances at Regis. I confess, now we do tire more easily and sometimes leave the floor before the dance is over! We still enjoy Manhattan and plan an annual weekend away and stay at Times Square enjoying a play, the restaurants and Mass at Saint Patrick's. I hope I have made up for the years of silence from a dumb kid from the Bronx who will be forever grateful to God for gifting me with the brilliant faculty at Regis. AMDG!" Joe Krassy sent a description of life in Arizona. "Tucson, Arizona is a great place for hiking among saguaros, swimming (or more accurately, floating) in the community pool, and soaring (a sport I share with my son who lives nearby) in a search for elusive mountain thermals. The obvious trade offs are a lack of rain and snow which tend to be in short supply down here. I do miss hanging out with the gang in DC which remains a bright spot of frivolity among reminiscences. I may yet find my way back to Virginia where my daughter lives in Leesburg. As it is, I'm going to be there for a couple of weeks to share Thanksgiving. Strange how computers and the internet seem to make such trips seem redundant." Mike Pyatok previously announced his retirement after a career addressing one of urban America's most difficult problems: homelessness. He has added a few more details about his plans. "I will continue as a consultant part time to the firm, helping with both design and getting planning approvals from local jurisdictions. I'll also continue my pro bono work, designing tiny house communities for the homeless in Oakland and writing articles about the shortcomings of capitalism and its inability to achieve economic and social justice. I love to draw by hand, so I'll continue my passion producing large pencil drawings of dystopian images that warn about the dangers of our excessive dependence on technology and consumption. Also for fun, I'll continue to build whimsical birdhouses! My wife Fern Tiger and I typically travel around Christmas and New Years for three or four weeks (both of our birthdays fall in that period), usually to developing nations to visit and document so-called 'slums' and squatter settlements, and meet some incredibly resilient people. We haven't done it for the past two years but are now planning an around-the-world trip for next year and will resume this work. We have already visited 65 nations. Fern is about to retire from the firm she started in 1978, helping nonprofits and public agencies to better engage and serve their constituencies with carefully conceived strategic plans. That's it for me—I'm now starting my next career!" Paul Diczok says that life is still good, if uneventful, in Lakewood Ranch. "Marianne and I putter about, chase the puppy Harry, play bridge, and enjoy the reviving arts scene. Grandson Jack Greer has started college at USF (University of South Florida) in Tampa. This means we get to travel there from time to time and see to it he's fed and we get to see his mom, our daughter Sarah, when she visits." Seb Pandolfo had a similar report. "It seems the only excitement, not to mention exercise, in my life involves traveling to the Midwest to tour colleges with my younger grandson, Miles, who is interested in Business Administration. We took a tour of the University of Chicago. We were impressed by the presentation to prospective students and by the campus itself, though Grandpa needed to recuperate from the walking tour of the very extensive grounds in ninety-degree heat. Our next tour brought us to Washington University in St. Louis, Indiana University, and Case Western Reserve. I've just learned that our older grandson, Graham, has been selected to be an intern in the office of Congressman Bill Pascrell (D-NJ) and our eight-year old granddaughter Lucy has completed surfing lessons that were interrupted by Tropical Storm Henri. At home, I have resumed work on the sequel to my novel. Given the cost of lumber, my woodworking has been curtailed. Nancy is afraid I may start taking apart and rebuilding our existing furniture." Tom Daley said that he had no real news. "COVID canceled our usual visits to see the Birmingham Daley's, but the two kids did fly up here in July for a week at 'Camp Nana' and had a terrific time playing with their Connecticut four cousins. Swimming, fishing, bicycling, amusement parks and zip-lining kept them busy. Sixteen year-old Tommy Daley is now the tallest Daley male, but only because the rest of us are short." Cosmo Salibello drove south toward warmer weather. "I visited Sue and Nick Zirpolo over a weekend in October. Palo Alto was a lot warmer and drier than Portland, OR. I hadn't seen them in almost three years, the last eighteen months the result of the pandemic. Getting out 'in the world' again was a soul-restoring experience. We spent a lot of time reminiscing about the mutually shared parts of our lives. We hoped that all the stuff in our rearview mirrors had spread to others in their lives and helped them tread the fine line between ambition and contentment. Since my return, Pam and I have been busy watching her grandchildren's sports matches. Sitting on aluminum bleacher seats is not as comfortable as I remember 25 years ago with my stepson! Sempre famiglia!" Greg D'Alessio and the Washington DC crowd sent the following report (and photo). "After an eighteen month hiatus, the DMV (DC, MD, VA), or Washington DC Metro Area contingent of the Class of 1961 resumed its semi-annual get-togethers with a

July lunch at the Army-Navy Club in Washington DC. These fraternal events were instituted immediately after our memorable 50th Reunion at Regis way back in 2011. This particular function was our slightly belated observance of the 60th anniversary of our graduation in June 1961. Greg D'Alessio, Bill Eng, Jim Giammo, Tom Walsh, Bob Crimmins, George Dowdall and Ted Vorburger were in attendance, George came all the way down from New Jersey to be with us. We bid farewell to our longtime DMV stalwart Ted Vorburger who planned to move to Colorado in August. We will miss Ted and his collection of original texts from our days at Regis including a remarkable, high-resolution image of our Senior Farewell Ball in which each young face in the crowd is clearly recognizable. The group was already down one member as we lost Joe Krassy to the lures of Arizona. Nevertheless, a good time was had by all; hopefully we will see each other again at Christmastime." Finally, please remember our classmate Tom Grella whom we lost in June. After his retirement from 3M in 1996, Tom moved from NYC to Lake Ariel, Pennsylvania. He enjoyed life in the Pocono Mountains - golfing, boating, and even forming his own doo-wop group with some friends. Tom suffered with cardiac issues for many years. These eventually became more severe and led to his death. His daughter, Vanessa Hamilton, wrote that "Dad spoke fondly of his time at Regis, even if he didn't always connect as an alumnus. When my brother and I were swamped with homework in high school (Bronx Science), he would share the strategies he and his classmates used at Regis to survive the workload (some a bit questionable!). He spoke of friends and the memories they made together, teachers he liked and some he didn't, and how he entered as a short young freshman and graduated at 6 feet 6 inches." May he rest in peace.

Paul Spagnoli, spagnoli@bc.edu

We have lost three more classmates: Greg Dixon, Bob Somma, and Bob Sullivan. Greg died on September 20th in Brooklyn. He had worked for Zim International Shipping Company for 34 years and at retirement was Vice President of the North Atlantic Region. He left his wife of 51 years, Maggie, and three sons. Bob Somma succumbed to Parkinson's disease a few days earlier. Wayne Merritt and I attended his large memorial service in Newburyport, MA, at which speakers discussed his prominent career as an attorney and judge. Some of us remembered Bob's pre-legal career as founding editor of Fusion, one of a handful of rock magazines established around 1970. It "was distinguished by its mix of grad-school intellectualism and high-level satire," according to a 2020 New Yorker essay. Everyone emphasized Bob's remarkable athletic accomplishments as a swimmer and triathlete. His daughter Willamain noted Bob's willingness, even eagerness, to take risks, and all agreed that Bob was always ready for anything. It could be hard for lesser mortals to keep up. I will never forget one of my own visits to Bob's family home in Stony Brook, LI, in the summer of 1966, during which one of his cousins tried to teach me to water-ski in "the creek," a narrow, winding inlet of Smithtown Bay. The ensuing crash put me in the hospital for almost three weeks. A few days before Bob's service I had the good fortune to get together with Frank Stella for the first time in almost half a century. Frank and his wife have been living in Ireland for the last couple of years, but they were on a post-pandemic trip home to reconnect with family and to see a new grandchild for the first time. While they were in western Massachusetts Frank suggested we meet up in Worcester for an extended lunch. It was great to catch up with another former Fusion contributor. (We both deny blame for the ultimate failure to win the competition with Rolling Stone). While in Worcester I was also able to track down Bob Sullivan, who was living there in retirement from the priesthood of the Archdiocese of Boston. (My day brought back memories of 1F, where alphabetic seating had Somma, Spagnoli, Stella, and Sullivan lined up in the back half of row 2.) Bob never used email, and I hadn't seen him since a Boston-area Regis reunion at Wayne's house more than a decade ago. His health had clearly declined. He had lost a leg, but his main problem was anemia, which required increasingly frequent blood transfusions. In consultation with his doctor, last summer Bob decided to stop the treatment and go into hospice care, while continuing to live in his apartment with caretaking assistance. Despite his precarious health, we had a good conversation that inevitably included memories of experiences with Somma in the late 60s and early 70s when we were all living in Cambridge, MA. I talked to Bob again after the Somma memorial service – he had requested a report on it – but less than two weeks later Bob died himself, peacefully, still in his apartment with his caretakers. To move on to less somber news, still from the northeast (and 1F), Bob Sheehan wrote to recall the importance of Regis in the mobility of his father (class of '22) out of "his family's lowest middle class existence." This history has helped motivate Bob to join in John O'Rourke's assistance to Ken Gavin's work at Brooklyn Jesuit Prep, in addition to his long-time support of after-school programs and charter schools for impoverished kids in East Harlem and the South Bronx. Farther afield (though still in 1F), Allan Service reports from Colorado that "I finally finished and (self) published the book I have been working on for about three years. My Irish Journey(s) is part memoir and part love story about my many journeys with my wife Esther to the island of Ireland over the past twenty-five years." From southern California (and 1E), Edward Ryan wrote that he had recently survived "two nice earthquakes nearby (not unusual). The second was a little scary but only knocked my stuffed bear off his perch atop the TV. Also a thunderstorm (very unusual)." Edward is happy that he can once more view Notre Dame football in a sports bar, and, he adds, "I actually went to a movie (CODA). It's been too hot to venture much away from the coast, but some road travel as the weather cools is planned." Speaking of weather, Bill Gallaher

(1B) wrote in mid-September that Louisiana was "still a third world country after Ida." He and his wife had evacuated (with difficulty) to join family in south Texas for eight days, but when they returned to their home just north of New Orleans they found significant roof damage. The roof was quickly patched up but may not be completely replaced for months, owing to the shortage of contractors and the scale of Ida's destruction. Bill continues to draw on his lifetime in virology to follow COVID closely, "trying to advise those around us and to protect our own lives," though he finds "the level of denial and resistance to common sense down here is really depressing. Even those who know of my long career don't listen to me, preferring instead some idiot on Fox News. I think the disrespect for what I know is the worst." Spencer Weig (back to 1F) has more cheerful news. "After nearly 40 years of practicing pediatrics, initially in primary care, and then as a child neurologist, I retired from UNC Chapel Hill in 2011. In 2016 Ellen and I (soon to celebrate our 50th anniversary) moved to the coast and settled in Wilmington, NC. We love it here, even with the humid weather and propensity to attract hurricanes. COVID unfortunately has limited our ability to visit our two sons and their families, both of whom live well above the Mason-Dixon line. Back in July though we made it to MA to visit that clan and are heading to Minneapolis in November to see the other gang. Like many of us I suppose, I was anxious about what retirement years would have to offer. That hasn't been a problem. Between work at church, getting involved as a student and occasional instructor at the local branch of the Osher Program (OLLI) at UNC Wilmington, trying my hand at writing, and enjoying the coastal life, we've been blessed. I have to confess we've not been in NYC in a long time, but if anyone makes it to this neck of the woods, please check in."

John Tweedy, john.tweedy@verizon.net

Jack Prael notes that this year's return to a live JUG Night was held in the Quadrangle and the opened-doors auditorium. Luke MacCarthy, Kevin Morris, and Jack represented 1963, enjoying the extensive presentation of appetizers and the fine selection of bottled and canned brews. All three were disappointed that more classmates were unable to attend, but hope next year will increase our numbers significantly. Jim Joyce, S.J. offers a copy of his oral history to Regions from 1963 and the surrounding years. You can email him at jjoyce@jesuits.org, send him your postal mailing address, and he will send you a copy. Dick Chiarello reports that the Texas Chiarellos are all vaccinated except 9 year-old granddaughter Olivia. Dick's wife Barbara has co founded the diversity committee at UT OLLI adult continuing ed and has written several letters to the editor that were published in local Texas papers and in the New York Times. Youngest daughter Elizabeth, PhD. is tenured at St. Louis University and is an opioid crisis expert who has been quoted in Bloomberg News and interviewed on St. Louis public radio and TV. Her book will be published by Princeton University Press. Daughter Katherine has been named a top litigator in Austin by a legal publication. Middle daughter Stephanie is chief of staff for Democratic State Rep. Bobby Guerra from the Rio Grande Valley. She is also a budding improv performer and political satirist in Over The Lege. Not to be outdone, Dick says he cooks, welds, and pretends to play golf! John Tweedy sadly notes the passing of Fr. Bob McGuire, S.J. in October 2021. He was our class's student counselor for most of our years at Regis and continued to be a good friend to John and his wife Pat for many years after. May he rest in peace. John and Pat also had a nice dinner on Arthur Avenue with Ray Sweitzer S.J. just prior to his move to Buffalo in October. Denise and Jack Stack are settling well into their new "coastal" lifestyle in South Carolina and look forward to enjoying a winter without snow.

Dr. Joe Coyne, drjcoyne@aol.com

We begin this edition of the Prowlings by noting the loss of our much esteemed brother, Dr. Lou Scheeder. Lou was Arts Professor at NYU's Tisch School for the Arts, where he was the founder and Director of The Classical Studio, an advanced training program in the Department of Drama. In addition, he was the Associate Dean of Faculty for the Tisch School. Those of you who have not seen them, see a variety of videos on YouTube. Do not miss him introducing Robert De Niro at NYU's Tisch

School commencement, especially the look on his face after he is seated and De Niro starts his speech. Ave atque vale! Marty Besant writes a long narrative about his exploits trying to get to Rwanda during the pandemic. (He has family working there.) The sheer scope of the details of this trip would do well in crafting a film script – what with multiple border crossings, COVID-checks, PCR tests, visa issues, and quarantines. Interestingly (or disturbingly) enough, upon reentry into the country, Marty reports no one "seemed to have the slightest concern about where I had been". In a second report, Marty reports that he, Rob Haberski, Dennis Moulton, and Tom Girolamo, an experienced group of travel companions, spent time together in Philadelphia. Marty reports: "An amazing diverse neighborhood and city. Highlight for me was the Art Museum, where I started alone. The "Rocky" steps were closed to prepare for a wedding. The musketeers caught up with me about 2 hours later (they had been church exploring, not an interest for me). They were hungry so we decided to find a bus to Reading Market for lunch. As they wandered looking for the bus stop, I asked a man with an employee badge for help. The gentleman turned out to be Tim Rub, the museum director. We then spent a great deal of time discussing several of the museum's exhibits and the major expansion of Buffalo's Albright-Knox-Gund museum. We returned the next day (all passes are valid for 2 day visit) and were able to see the massive flower decorations that remained from the wedding. Final day was spent with individual interests although we did enjoy a great Italian dinner in the neighborhood. If we are finally able to shake COVID's grip, the plan is Scotland in May. We will have to wait a bit longer before we start to put $$$ down." In other news, Bob Shullman reports: "Thankfully all goes well with us in our portion of CT. I thought about attending JUG Night but the need to ride the railroad and then the subway to 84th Street was not overly appealing with COVID still roaring. So perhaps next year if the situation really improves. Also Jeff, I believe, continues to plan for a Christmas get-together at Brendan's, again depending on the COVID situation, as we get closer to December and how many of the usual gang are up for it. Hopefully COVID will be less of an issue then and we'll see Brendan's group in December. (Joe Coyne confirms that part of the 'hand-off' of the Scribe's duties included an offer by Mr Weinlandt – most gratefully accepted – to continue to orchestrate the NYC Brendan's Restaurant dinners.) I have been doing my best to stay out of trouble and remain healthy by playing lots of Pickleball and as Treasurer of the community where we live managing our community's finances. Last but not least, we are getting our booster shots this Wednesday." I had requested someone report the going's on at this past JUG Night and Davie Ritchie volunteered the following: "Out of charity, I will attribute the somewhat disappointing presentation of JUG Night this year to the residue of COVID regulations and the substitution of a new caterer. The downstairs gym was devoted to some grammar school kids' sports. The cafeteria was closed to use by returning alumni as well. The only place that had about fifteen or so unspecified "class tables" was the auditorium which had doors open to the quadrangle, where most "Owls", Golden or still dark haired, gathered in clusters. Most food was available at the quadrangle serving tables. A couple of waitresses circulated as well and some found their way into the auditorium once in a while. The appetizers were laid out. Most just so-so. The drinks table had cheaper beer ($3 a pitcher) but NO non-alcoholic choices. Our class (or the two classmates who got there before I did, Dennis Mouton and Ron Tristal) had commandeered an auditorium table (just three were occupied: ours, another Golden Owl class's and one rather young group of guys). Vin Alline eventually joined us shortly afterward, but that was it. Someone spotted name tags (an innovation of more or less value, I suppose) for two other men but, if they ever had made it into the school, they failed to find our table in the unexpected venue of the auditorium. I had found it by calling Ron Tristal's cell phone. So there were four attendees (Alline, Moulton, Ritchie, Tristal) and we had a pleasant three hour or so conversation until 10 pm. No earth shattering revelations, other than that we are spending more time with doctors than in the past." Many thanks to Dave for his contribution to this RAN. As I reported earlier in an email to all, I have had the great pleasure of reconnecting with Dr. Rich Luc, my fellow long-sufferer from Frosh Cross-Country, via Zoom. He was wondering about "Film Appreciation" while we were at Regis and sends the following message: “I do not remember the teacher’s name but I believe he taught English (Morelli? or am I just fungal headed?) and it was during either our freshman or our sophomore year that he had a Film Appreciation Seminar/Club/ Group... I do not remember all of the films and am probably mis-remembering some. I remember : The Pawnbroker (Rod Steiger); The Mouse That Roared (and probably The Mouse on the Moon as well) Peter Sellers; Kali Nite, Socrates (or whatever the Greek is for “Good Night, Socrates”; Testa de Roca (or whatever it is for “Rock Head”). I’m sure there were others in addition to this mis-remembered few.... Perhaps our school chums (always wanted to write that- been watching the Hardy Boys on cable) can fill out the rest? Or let me know it (film group) was just another false memory that the voices have whispered to me (I thought The Whisperers (Edith Evans) was one but that came out in 1967 (just purchased it on blu ray)... Or was it in college I saw these and now am I discovering there was even more trauma in those four years at St. Pete’s in Jersey City than I thought??? Aging minds want to know.” This precipitated a variety of responses. Almost right away, Denis Burt posted “No, no, Rich, you are not crazy. As I recall, we met on Saturday mornings. We would watch a film all the way through, then have a discussion and watch it a second time. We even did that with The Mouse that Roared, definitely a Sellars classic! I don’t remember the last two you mentioned, but I think we may have watched The Third Man and Twelve O’Clock High? Maybe others will remember more. I also don’t remember who moderated – Morelli doesn’t ring a bell. I do remember the experience, though, and really enjoying this extracurricular activity.” Dan McCaffrey began by wondering: “I wasn’t in that club, but could the moderator have been Mr. Robert Marasco ’54? He was one of my favorite teachers, for his odd sense of humor.” This propelled Rich Luc into research mode: “Well, I went to the “Well of All Class-of-1964 Knowledge,” our own Pierian Spring: Dennis’s baby (Dennis Moulton), the yearbook! It says on page 214 that the film seminar showed: Goodnight, Socrates; High Noon; On the Waterfront; Raisin in the Sun; The Mouse That Roared; and Odd Man Out. So, I had two right... looks just like one of my old half sheets. BTW, director of Odd Man Out was Carol Reed who also did the Third Man which may be why Denis recalled that film. Moderator is listed as Kenneth DeLuca, SJ but I don’t recall him- but I’ve just shown my memory has remained pretty consistent for over 55 years- you know- bad!” Denis Burt came back with; “You know, I didn’t say so, but I was thinking that it was actually a Jesuit and not a layman. I was also trying to decide whether we had viewed a Bergman film – I remember seeing The Magician all those many years ago, but I see it is not in the list. Makes me wonder where I did see that one. And now that I think about it, I believe I actually saw Twelve O’Clock High in a management training course. A fun trip down memory lane. Thanks, guys.” (What I want to know is what were the goals and objectives of this ‘management training’ course!). Bob Schmidt follows on: “It was Deluca for the film seminar. Crew cut, young, a scholastic (Mr. DeLuca). Maybe there were multiple subgroups. I wouldn’t have come in from NJ on a Saturday. I think the showings I went to were in the afternoon after classes, but I only remember HN, OTW and RITS. The first two left a life-long impression on me. Watching season 5 of the Goliath series the other day (Billy Bob Thornton), I felt a resonance homage to High Noon.” Lou Fuoco responds: “Nice investigative reporting, Rich. I wasn’t a member of this club but in retrospect I wish I had been. I had Mr. DeLuca for Latin in our senior year and he was a great teacher. I was in his class when we got the news about JFK’s assassination.” The conversation continued as Marty Besant wondered: “Was Mr DeLuca also the RDS moderator?” Tom Reilly confirms: “Yup. I remember High Noon and On The Waterfront particularly. We also watched a WWII documentary film—The Battle of San Pietro?— Twice. Mr. DeLuca. Saturdays.” Rich Luc caps off the discussion with a reference back to Bob Schmidt’s post: “Bob: agree about Goliath. I did come in from Jersey- did it for cross county freshman year... and yes, there might have been multiple groups... competing groups? (something competitive at Regis?).” Another, entirely different, thread developed after Jeff Weinlandt’s question: “I noticed in the “Milestones” section on the last page (Page 31) under ‘Weddings’ that a certain Matt Quigley ’02 was married to Alyssa Sophie Cohen on May 1, 2021. ‘Quigley’ is about as common a last name as ‘Weinlandt,’ so I am wondering if Matt is Martin Quigley’s son. When I wrote the Prowlings I always wondered how many of our classmates had ‘legacy; sons who attended Regis. I certainly know two from Jeff Weinlandt... William Weinlandt ’10 and Thomas Weinlandt ’10. Mike Christy’s son is Nicholas Christy ’91, Frank Michel’s son is David Michel ’96, Paul Czuchlewski’s son is David Czuchlewski ’94, and I know at least one deceased classmate also had a son at Regis (can’t recall the name).” Bob Metz opines: “I believe Tom Lennon is the deceased classmate.” Bob Haberski supports Mr. Metz’s opinion and adds an interesting comment: “As a sidenote, how about members of the class who have highly accomplished but ineligible daughters only - Frank Silvestri, Marty Besant, Ken Service and Bob Enright all pop into my head.” (No one responded to this but perhaps more information will be forthcoming in a future RAN.) Mike Christy added: “The Regions of Nick’s era seem to have had a different, less satisfying experience. I think his class may hold the record for most consecutive RANs with no Prowlings.” Kevin Rodgers added: “My son, Kris Rodgers ’09, is a frequent visitor to our table at JUG Night.” Bob Schmidt went in a different direction with his comment: “My father Robert Schmidt ’37 went to Regis and a brother Larry Schmidt ’71 in early 70s, but no son.” All this triggered a brief tangential discussion started by Mike Christy’s comment: “I seem to recall Mr. John Connelly ’56 teaching Geometry (as opposed to History) in sophomore year. There was a funny incident with a reference to A Lion Sleeps Tonight. When Sue and I walked in for an open school night in ’88 or so, I was surprised he recognized me at first sight. Apparently Nick was his first son of an alum.” Marty Besant confirms: “I agree - Mr Connolly was my sophomore geometry teacher.” Paul Czuchlewski added: “If I recall correctly, he seemed to delight in using class time to prove various theorems in a completely different way from what was shown in the MSG textbook so it surprised me to later see that history, not math, was apparently his true love (perhaps, just another Regis Renaissance Man?).” Finally, Jeff Weinlandt wrote to me: “Frank Silvestri mailed me (a few photos) several years ago when he found this stuff in a desk I had to clean out so contractors could move it to refinish the floor. Thought you would find it of interest.” One memorable photo shows Louis Scheeder and Frank Silvestri, roommates at Georgetown for many years.

1965

Dave O’Brien shared his thoughts on the passing of George Griffith: “Deeply saddened by the passing of our long-serving class rep George Griffith. George was a close friend who, like me, was a commercial real estate attorney. From George, I first learned of the long tradition of Regis alumni helping each other in their careers. While courageously battling health and career challenges, he never failed in his kindness and concern for classmates. A father of two Regions, George firmly believed that Regis could make a huge difference in this world.” John Woodruff’s daughter, Kristen Woodruff Salis, delivered a baby girl on October 9th. Willa Eloise Salis. John’s novel The War at Home has started to come out on Audible. Book One, “Battle of Flushing,” narrated by the author, has been available since the end of August. Book Two, “Assault on Fordham Heights,” is in the works. Bob Carlina writes “I attended the Mensa Annual Gathering or, as it is known in Mensa-cool circles, Mensa-Con (argh) in Houston in August. (Hey, brains don’t mean common sense). Several of the talks were educational and informative but the one I enjoyed most was given by Caroline Cocciardi. Her 1 ½ hour talk, including slide show presentation, was based on her book Leonardo’s Knots. She has studied da Vinci for 20+ years, especially his obsession with knot making and incorporating knots into his paintings. Based on the knot pattern on the neck of the frock she asserted that it was not done by Leonardo’s hand. She further asserted that the authentic, later version, was not a commissioned work because the fabric of the frock appears to be wool and dyed green, both considered déclassé in 16th Century Florence.” Pat Dallet writes “For the first time in two years we were able to visit our two daughters and their families in person rather than on Zoom. Spent a month in Northern Portugal and Spain. Especially happy to be with our only grandchild who celebrated his last two birthdays without us. Very thankful for Delta (the airline!). Our son in Pittsburgh came down for the month of June and worked remotely from our house. All good.” Paul Strong, John Woodruff, Ken Heid and Ron Statile played together in the Annual Regis Golf Outing at Pelham Country Club on June 14. No word on who shot best. Joe Featherston is mentoring new teachers to the NYCDOE in his “retired” role as a F status assistant principal at Channel View School for Research in Rockaway Beach. He is also directing weekly recreational activities for Special Olympians at The Guild for Exceptional Children in Brooklyn and at St. Camillus Parish in Rockaway. He still coaches the CYO cross country team at St. Francis de Sales. Joe and his son Joseph, who is a sophomore at Iona College, have season tickets to St. John’s basketball and partial plans to the Yankees and Nets. Joe and his wife Maureen enjoy their walks/bike rides along the 5 mile long Rockaway boardwalk and especially enjoyed their vacation to Mohonk Mountain House. On August 18 we were able to resurrect our long delayed “beer conference” at Slaterry’s Pub. We spent several hours reminiscing and updating each other. The baker’s dozen attending: Bob Carlina, Andrew Cavanaugh, Don Ullisse, Rick Dunn, Al Airone, Bob Kalisch, Vin Daly, Mike Ingrisani, John Woodruff, Jim Klein, Ron Statile, John Fogarty and John Felago. October 15’s JUG Night was sparsely attended. The diehard attendees were John Felago, Harry Kutner, Rich Superti, John Fogarty, Bob Kalisch and Frank Pasquale. Ed Kulsick has completed the initial course of 12 chemo sessions (interrupted by a positive COVID test and a diagnosis of COVID-related pneumonia, both very mild) and is now undergoing maintenance chemo treatments designed to keep the cancer from growing back for as long as possible. Fatigue and neuropathy are the biggest side effects. And it’s still one day at a time. Feel free to reach out to Ed at (ekulsick@cox.net). Dick Denecker writes “After 39+ years in financial services, as of March 1, 2021 I have retired as Senior Vice President - Wealth Management of the Denecker/Daly Wealth Consulting Team @ UBS Financial Services in Richmond, Virginia. It was a great ride. Now I’m ready to start the next chapter in my life. Maria and I will spend some more time at our vacation home in the “Northern Neck” of Virginia, off the Chesapeake Bay (we hope classmates will come visit). In addition, I have been involved with the Hanover Tavern Foundation (north of Richmond and once owned by Patrick Henry) as a theater/ dining/meeting venue. Over the past 30 years, I have served as a 3-time President of the Foundation and still serve on the Executive Committee. I also spend time in Virginia Beach at The Colony Condominiums as President of the Home Owners Association for the past 36 years. Classmates, come visit or stop off in Virginia!” Bob Kalisch, having been away from Europe since February 2020, is planning on flying to London on November 17 and staying in London, West Sussex and Berkshire for two weeks. He writes “Hopefully I can get back to my routine of going every few months. As I am also retiring from my position as a senior attorney with the New Jersey Office of the Public Defender effective January 1, 2022, I will have to see how the finances go, and whether I will be back to travelling to the UK and Europe every 3 months again, or spacing it out to every 4 months. I cannot believe that I have worked for the State of New Jersey since May of 1989, but there is a time when being fair to yourself means taking a deserved rest from even a job that always gave enjoyment and a sense of accomplishment.” Tom Moebus is happy to report that a new junior class of 8 Matteo Ricci Young Scholars at Regis has just begun a year of engagement with 6 scholars at Dominican Academy, our sister school in NY, and 14 at Nanjing Foreign Language School in Jiangsu Province, China. This matches the complement of 28 Scholars we had last year. About half of that number are continuing as seniors for a second year of engagement with each other and the challenging issues of climate change. In addition to our partnership with the World Economic Forum, we have added a partnership with the World Resources Institute through its Cool Food project, which focuses on the link between food supply, diet choices, and their impacts on climate change. Given that this years’ John Francis Regis (JFR) Initiative is focused on the social issues of Climate Change, our Ricci Scholars are positioned to play a leading role within the school, and also in the greater community. The Regis students (and their parents) have found the Ricci program to be a valuable part of their education, adding a unique international perspective and opportunity for engagement. We are hoping to deliver on the promise of a visit to China in the summer of 2022. Fingers crossed. Continuing thanks to the members of the Class of 1965 who stepped forward to help financially with the development of this important new initiative. Wearing a different hat, with a couple of partners, I've helped over 100 businesses shift and pivot their way through the pandemic minefield over the past year through the 4-session Shift Workshop. Looking to continue this with a new supporting partner in 2022. And created a self-education program called Living with Heart in the Second Part (of Life). trmoebus@gmail.com if you are interested..."

Bob Logan writes "The pandemic changed the practice of law here in New Jersey, as it did everywhere. Doing our court hearings and deposition remotely allowed us to keep defending malpractice cases from home, so we didn't have to shut down the office. An unexpected benefit is not having to leave home at 7:00 a.m. for a five-minute hearing in some remote county. I do miss getting together at court events with friends and colleagues, but I doubt we will ever go back to the number of in-person hearings we used to do. We did one of the post-shutdown trials in the state for three weeks in July. It was certainly a novel experience with jury selection via Zoom, and the chosen jurors sitting in the courtroom behind Plexiglass barriers and wearing masks. It was remarkable how well everyone adapted to the new situation and went on with their jobs. I had a virtual deposition a few weeks ago with Hugh Turk '66 on the other side. We didn't have a chance to catch up, but it was good to see him again, even if only on a computer screen. I'm continuing my German studies once a week on Zoom as well. I have accepted that I'm never going to be fluent, but it's still enjoyable. Trying to get my homework assignment finished before class starts reminds me of studying flashcards on the subway many years ago. Credit to Father Daley for inspiring an interest in the language that has stayed with me.

Steve Boatti, sboatti@gmail.com

Lots of news, as I missed sending in my last column! Steve Bogacz's son Jesse completed a solid first year at William & Mary Law School. He made the Moot Court team, which is nationally ranked (8th in the nation), and was inducted into the W & M chapter of Phi Delta Phi, the international legal honor society. Bob VerEecke has published a book of poetry called On the Quiver of Mystery. Jim Kuntz's review: "It's sensitive and thoughtful spiritual reading — no surprise there. He works at the Jesuit retreat house in Gloucester, MA, and the poems and photographs draw inspiration from that time and place." Bill Mulligan is teaching half-time at Murray State University and will retire in May. He continues as president of the Jackson Purchase Historical Society and has five short essays in the Bicentennial History of Calloway County (KY), due out next year. On October 16, Richard Ouzounian directed the first large-scale theatre production to open in Toronto once theatres were allowed to operate at full capacity. It was a production of Stephen Sondheim's Follies in Concert, with a cast of 20 led by Eric McCormack and a 24-piece orchestra. The event was a benefit for the Royal Conservatory of Music and sold out its three performances. John La Ruffa updates us on his family's challenges: "To sum up the past 2 years would take a long time. Simply put, my family and I have been caring for Susan, my wife of 35 years, who was diagnosed with dementia in February 2020. Earlier this year, Susan was in rehab because of a fractured ankle that she "acquired" in the hospital last December. Due to COVID, I could not visit her, and this precipitated quite an increase in her level of dementia (Cerebral Amyloid Angiopathy). Susan has been home since mid-April, and we have developed a great and positive care plan, including caregivers, and incredible, multi-generational family help; our great-granddaughter Amelia, 4, has a unique and loving relationship with Susan, and is a welcome visitor. (We are looking forward to the arrival of Amelia's baby sister in late December; we will then have our 3 children, 5 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren.) Our daughter Ginny, who lives in San Francisco, and Eric, our younger son, who lives in Miami, have visited to help out. Our older son Jesse, a Boston firefighter, is here very often and has been wonderfully supportive. I have returned to work at Trader Joe's, working one abbreviated shift per week, and that has been beyond gratifying, seeing folks, customers, coworkers, many of whom I had not seen for all this time. As I describe it often to family and friends: Under this gigantic canopy of nearly overwhelming sadness, Susan and I have so much joy and we are blessed. Susan thrives on company, and now that most are vaccinated, we welcome people at all hours! If any of you find yourselves anywhere near Boston, we are here!" Tom Gallagher reports: "On October 11, 7 of the 11 members of the 1966 Homeric Academy held a video reunion that spanned a continent and a half, with a wine dark sea in between. After reviewing the 8 propositions they had defended on the auditorium stage on the evening of May 13, 1966, Tom Huertas (Bad Homburg, Germany) opened by posing the relevant questions: Just who was Milman Parry and what does paratactic mean, anyhow? Tim O'Connor (NYC) recalled his Iliad text being the last thing he saw before the lights went out on the subway home on November 9, 1965. John D'Emilio (Chicago) — who missed Homeric Night due to chickenpox — reported that Columbia University lost one Classics major by offering him only comedy his first semester, when it was tragedy that he craved. Both Bob VerEecke (Gloucester, MA) and Jim Kuntz (New Brunswick, NJ) (the only two to subsequently study Greek), exhibited Homeric influences, Bob in reading a poem he wrote dedicated to Jack La Bonte, describing a ροδοδακτυλος dawn, and Jim in his lighter verse orally composed on the spot. Tom Gallagher (San Francisco) spoke of visiting Agamemnon's Mycenae and Nestor's Palace during a week of driving the Peloponnese this past summer. Hank Ferraoli (Basking Ridge, NJ) closed, vowing a return to the classics — likely speaking for more than just himself." From John D'Emilio: "At the end of September, I made my first trip to New York in two years — because of the pandemic, the longest stretch of time without a visit to the city. Highlight of the trip were two dinners with groups of Regis classmates. Thanks to Dave Flanagan for all the initiative he put into making these gatherings happen." John refers to the unofficial mini-reunion in New York in September comprising 3 dinners and a Met opera performance of Fire Shut up in My Bones. Thursday night at Heidelberg we filled their Beer Garden, a pleasant space behind the restaurant. Friday outside Il Violino on 68th Street, new people, different seating arrangements and continued conversation. Mr. Kappes joined us for both dinner and the opera and gave a small preview of it and his role in preparing the text that appears on the back of the seats. Saturday at Arte, the smallest group, we roamed around the back of the restaurant and the outdoor space beyond. Present on one or more evenings: Frank Belloni, John Demilio, Margaret and Henry Ferraioli, Barbara and Dave Flanagan, Rich Gayzur, Ken Kellaher, Jim Kuntz, Bob Lapinski, Peggy and Tim O'Connor, Jim Periconi and Victoria de Grazia, Charlie Pignatello, Bill Schoener, Linda and John Van Name, Patricia and Steve Stuart, Mary Ann and Lou Recano and Dan Zirker. Future gathering news: We are working on ideas for a 56th REUNION CELEBRATION for the last weekend of June 2022. Finally, we know the Regis magazine is sent to addresses on file for several classmates we haven't heard from in a while: Tony Ciccone, John Coogan, JC and JP Cunningham, Paul Fraioli, Ricky Helfrich, Pete Joyce, Bob Kelly, John Marquardt, Terry McDonough, Bob Nehr Korn, Tom Porucznik, Rich Rippetoe, Ed Scheer, and Dan Schoemer. Please contact me or someone in the class and let us know how you are faring.

Much can and will be said about the impending retirement of Fordham University President Joseph McShane, S.J., next June after shepherding Fordham through nearly two decades of growth and high achievement. Quoting his predecessor, Joseph O'Hare, S.J., '48, he said, "It's time. It's just time to step aside and allow someone else to have the great joy of leading Fordham into the future." Joe will have held the position for 19 years, the same as O'Hare, although Joe also logged an additional six years on Rose Hill as dean. O'Hare's predecessor, James C. Finley, S.J. '40, was also a Regian, so Fordham has been led for a full half-century by Jesuits who once walked through the same tunnel we did. Joe is the 32nd president of the 180-year-old university with campuses in the Bronx and at Lincoln Center. The school, in its own announcement, said, "Under Father McShane, Fordham completed a decades-long transformation from well-regarded regional institution to prestigious national university—growing larger, academically and fiscally stronger, and more diverse than ever." He has raised $1 billion for Fordham, quadrupling the endowment, and spent that much on new construction and infrastructure. Joe has been as popular among students as he has with the trustees. He once left JUG Night quite early, explaining he had to get to the Ramskeller for a dance "or the students will be disappointed." He isn't sure what he will do for his next act. Speaking of JUG Night, eight of us -- Ed Penny, Art Bender, Jim Keaney, Chris Meatto, Kevin McDonald, John Katz, Bob Blake and Bill Armbruster -- made it back to our haunting grounds in mid-October, half our usual outsized contingent but quite a showing in the shadow cast by the pandemic. (Everyone had to show their vaccination cards and get a temperature check to enter.) Paul Litka phoned in from Utah. The gathering was held primarily in the quadrangle and fortunately the weather was perfect for an outdoor event. The big news came from Bill Armbruster, who got engaged over the summer to Nancy Robinson. They first met 50 years ago, stayed in touch over the years and, after Nancy's husband died, reconnected. They plan to marry next June on the campus of Ramapo College in New Jersey, where Nancy worked for

38 years, the last 15 as Dean of Students. Art Bender is glad to be back teaching in person again, but said it's hard to recognize students with their masks. The veteran History teacher also said it was astounding to see how much students had grown since he last saw them as sophomores a year and a half ago. Jon Katz and his wife Jane, also a Fordham Ram, attended their 50th reunion at Fordham. Kevin McDonald plans to retire from his law practice on Bastille Day next July. Chris Meatto is still working at a start-up medical technology firm in Hoboken. Quite a few classmates emailed their regards. Jack Alexander was unable to attend because he and wife Karen left for Maui the day before. "Wish I knew the dates before I booked the trip," Jack quipped. Bob DeCresce had registered and even bought plane tickets but had to cancel because of a work-related event that day in Chicago. "Time for me to retire," Bob wrote. Bill McLaughlin had also registered but decided to skip JUG Night out of an abundance of caution. Bill was in town for a family wedding and felt a need "to minimize possible COVID exposure out of respect/concern for my hosts who are putting me up for four nights. John Kelly, another regular, missed because he was attending a niece's wedding in Colorado. George McCann wrote that he is recovering from a knee replacement. "All my best to everyone and raise a glass to Pete Landis for me," George said. Knee replacement surgery also factored into Rene Haas's decision not to attend, but in his case it was wife Sharon who had the surgery. "Unfortunately, I won't be joining you this year. Raise a few for me. Best to all. Semper Fi," wrote ex-Marine Dennis O'Brien. Steve Rehm decided to pass on JUG Night due to COVID concerns. "Everything is fine - many blessings... busy with a FinTech Board seat...things ok on the family front," wrote Steve, the youngster in our class, who turned 70 in July. Also sending regrets were: Marty Maffeo from Boston, Kieran Quinn from Hilton Head, Chris Connell from Virginia, Jay Azarow from the Bay Area, and Sal DeLuca from Long Island. The new year will mark the 55th anniversary of our graduation, which we will not let pass without a proper celebration in the Big Apple. Email Chris if you have suggestions and stay tuned for developments. Classmates have fond memories of Father Bob McGuire, S.J., our genial college counselor, who died at the age of 93 at the Jesuit infirmary in the Bronx. Kevin

McDonald remembers Father McGuire's trying to dissuade him from going to Notre Dame and dangling the prospect of financial aid if he went to Loyola of New Orleans instead for its "great Latin American studies program. Note, I had not expressed the slightest interest in Latin American studies!" said Kevin, one of our Fightin' Irish trio along with Bill Balcerski and Charlie Novitsky. He added, "My wife and I are chompin' at the bit to resume traveling, with a twice (COVID) postponed trip to Scotland now re-booked for June. Fingers crossed. Bill Balcerski just texted some photos from Sarajevo." With COVID tests coming and going, Nancy and Chris Connell got to meet their newborn second granddaughter, Evelyn, in Geneva in September. Michael Fahy writes, "Melodee and I are pleased to announce the arrival of our first grandchild, Rowan Wilde Fahy, born Oct. 9 to our son Brendan and wife Lindsey. This grandchild announcement has a Regis connection. Since we live in California and our new grandson lives in Manhattan, we decided to take advantage of the COVID slump in the NYC real estate market and try to buy a little studio in the city to make it easier to visit. I knew our classmate Chris Meatto had dabbled in real estate and when I contacted him, he put me in touch with Mike Connor's wife Noni, a veteran real estate pro specializing in the Manhattan market. Noni found us the perfect studio on E. 33rd and we will be closing on our pied-a-terre in November. Too late for JUG Night, but we can use it for our 55th reunion!" Kieran and Bill Hauck had a mini-reunion in Old Town Alexandria, where Bill and spouse Diane stopped en route to a family vacation in Charleston and Hilton Head, S.C. "A lovely visit over a good Italian meal," said Bill. "We shared rough walking stories," he said. Bill strides with ski poles and Kieran is treading cautiously as he deals with Parkinson's. Bill hopes to get down to Kieran's neck of the woods again with Marty Maffeo, whose daughter Lauren has a condo in DuPont Circle. The Hilton Head vacation with Bill's sisters Cathy and Marg was the first time the sibs spent a week together since high school. The Haucks' three children, Mike, Lilly and Gracie, all live near them in Brookline, Mass. (They lost another son, Danny, in an auto accident in 1987.) Diane retired in 2020 after 40 years as an ICU nurse at Tufts Medical. Bill, who retired a decade ago, describes his regimen as "read, write, watch, walk. Did gym before COVID." Bill, who lives in Brookline, Mass., is already looking forward to the 55th reunion. Dennis Mahoney will gladly share either in German or English his latest paper on the late 18th century German poet and philosopher Novalis (pen name of Friedrich von Hardenberg) and his connection with the Jesuits. Dennis dedicated the scholarly article, which appeared in the yearbook of the International Novalis Society, to his late uncle, Rev. Ambrose Mahoney, S.J., "and all my Jesuit teachers at Regis and Holy Cross College." His email is Dennis.Mahoney@uvm.edu. Victor Skowronski has moved to the New Horizons at Choate Senior Independent Living facility. The avid cyclist writes, "As someone living by myself with no immediate family nearby, I thought it best to move to a place where there would be people to check on me and with whom to socialize. I am finding this very refreshing." We suspect English country dances will soon be on the activity list at Choate if they are not already. And finally, this from Paul Litka: "My comments in the last Prowlings about getting out after COVID have unfortunately proven to be over optimistic, at least here in Utah. While Utah's mortality per capita looks good because of the young and healthy population and excellent health care system, the case incidence continues to be high. While not housebound, Laura and I remain very cautious about our outside activities. I would describe (it) as 'lock-down lite.' We hope to go to Greece next fall, with a stopover to visit old friends in London. We will see what happens with that."

Our class lost a great man, truly a man for others, Dave Colangelo, on September 12, 2021. We have heard from a number of classmates, especially the Staten Island contingent, and those who knew Dave's heroic story. What follows is Dave's obituary, written by his brother, and some additional thoughts from his friend, Joe Loffredo. For additional information on what made the last 47 years of his life so challenging, and how he met the challenge early on, please Google "A Triumph Over Adversity" and "Washington Post" to find their 1977 article. Obituary, edited from Legacy.com: "DAVID ANTHONY COLANGELO, 68, passed away at home on Sunday, September 12, 2021. David was born and raised on Staten Island, NY and graduated from Regis High School in 1970 and Columbia University in 1973. He then moved to Washington, DC to attend Georgetown University Law Center. Early in his second year of law school, he was shot in a robbery, instantly becoming paralyzed from the neck down. Determined to still become an attorney, he returned to Georgetown Law the following year, after a lengthy hospitalization involving multiple surgeries and physical rehabilitation. The Georgetown law community, family, and friends all assisted him in returning to school. David graduated in 1977, took the bar exam orally, and began his 37-year career with the National Labor Relations Board in the Division of Advice. The NLRB recognized that by granting David generous workplace accommodations necessitated by his quadriplegia, it was gaining an outstanding analytical attorney as well as a personable mentor to new attorneys he later supervised. Severely disabled for 47 years, David displayed extraordinary perseverance, thoughtfulness and acceptance. He had a gentle demeanor, a fierce determination, and profound gratitude to the family, friends, and medical professionals who enhanced the quality and length of his life. Dave is survived by his wife of 40 years, Dorothy Saunders, his sons Andrew (Lauren) and Stephen, his grandchildren, Jack, Charlie, and Grace, his mother, Lorraine, his brothers, John (Margie) and Peter (Mary Anne), his sister Mary Ellen, and many nieces, nephews and extended family members. His father Anthony predeceased him." Joe Loffredo adds some personal reflections about our classmate: "Dave Colangelo was one of the Staten Island crew. We all met up every morning at our regular bench on the upper deck of the 7.30 ferry and spent the time studying together, mixed with teen-age banter. My Dad's family knew Dave's family, so Lou Deasaro would break into the theme from The Patty Duke Show when he saw us together. We were lab partners in Father Egan's Physics class in Senior Year, along with Rich Esposito. We had spirited experiments as we pondered the mysteries of gravity and centrifugal force. Dave quietly ascended into the top tier of RHS class rankings, earning him acceptance into Columbia. Since freshmen in 1970 could not stay in the dorms, Dave had another year of an even worse commute from Staten Island. We worked together at my Dad's company, Thomas Cook & Sons. One lunch hour we were together on Fifth Avenue in front of a store when our Selective Service lottery numbers were announced. We both got really lousy numbers, lower than 50. It was good for us to be together when we got the news. I got the news in the fall of 1974 of the shooting, and visited Dave at the Rusk Institute. It was devastating to see him in that condition, but even then I could see his commitment to recover to the best of his ability. We recently reconnected on LinkedIn, thanks to Tom Quinlan. I drove down to St. Clare's in Staten Island a few weeks ago for the Memorial Mass. His sister delivered a moving tribute, revealing that he had chosen Ignatius as his confirmation name, and giving him credit for selecting such an unusual name, risking taunts from his classmates. I assured her afterwards that Dave was never taunted, probably due to him not really mentioning the name. But it did illustrate how natural it was that he would come to Regis. Dave was a smart guy, a good student, and a great friend. He helped me and the other Staten Islanders get through the four years, and survived for 47 years in a condition that few of us can imagine. Requiesce in pace, David." Mark Tronco reports in from overseas: "I was fortunate to be able to spend three months during the summer in England learning to ride thoroughbred race horses and then, on September 24, rode in the 50th edition of the Ride of Their Lives charity race at York Racecourse. My wife and I look forward to the chance to see you all at the Reunion." Speaking of which, the Lth Reunion for the Class of 1970 has been rescheduled for the weekend of May 13-15, 2022. Please join us. The remarkable daughter of Kevin Bryant, Annie, has had two papers on her Alzheimers research accepted for publication. She will be leaving in January to begin her PhD studies in Australia at the University of Sydney. Bill Lee writes that he is looking forward to our L+2 Reunion. Bill is doing some temporary work in connection with VA's November elections (absentee ballots, staffing early voting locations), with lots of overtime hours. His sister says that Bill has an "odd concept of retirement." Of course, COVID has cut into his travels to see the 15 remaining baseball parks on his list (3 major league, 12 minor league). Lou Deasaro, Captain, US Navy (Retired), reports that he misses city living, but that "living in the Houston area with our grandchildren is great." Phil Gandolfo reports, "I'm in awe of what a courageous life Dave Colangelo led. I had no clue. What a role model and a man who walked the walk when it comes to living the principles ingrained upon us by the Jesuits at Regis. I am numbed by his amazing strength and life accomplishments." Phil reports his younger daughter Nicole moved from Cincinnati to Hockessin, DE in December with her three kids. She works with kids with cancer at DuPont's children's hospital in Wilmington. His older daughter Christine and her husband and two kids are still in Arlington, MA and doing well. Phil spoke of Dave Colangelo's courage, but he is displaying his own. After a six-year stretch in remission from lung cancer, Phil's cancer has returned and progressed. Phil believes his new meds and radiation will help put the illness back in remission. In the meantime, his family, friends and classmates can support Phil with prayers. Please keep Phil and family in your prayers." Jack Martin's son John married Nicole Grosjean in July. The married couple both work for Nielsen Media. Daughter Megan and her husband Mark are new parents of John Thomas "Jack" Bisanzo, born six weeks early at 4 pounds but doing fine. Little Jack is Jack and Maryann's first grandchild. Like the rest of us so privileged, I am confident they are loving it. And now for something completely different: Recently, as summer was ending, NY Knicks All-Star Julius Randle shot a commercial for Vroom in the Martin driveway. Jack remains a busy retiree, having recently covered the Astros-White Sox Division Series, and making first-time trips for football games to Penn State's Beaver Stadium, and Green Bay's Lambeau Field. On October 21st, the Regis community lost Fr. Robert A. McGuire, 93, affectionately known as "Sweaty Bob." A Xavier grad who never held it against us, he helped many in our class find their way to the next stop in their educational journeys. In particular, he herded 10, 11 or maybe 12 of us cats to LeMoyne College in Syracuse, New York. There, your scribe Kevin Conboy met Maureen during Freshman Orientation Week and the rest, as they say, is history. We are at 46 years and counting. Thank you, Sweaty Bob, and rest in peace. Gerry McDermott retired from the Anglican Chair at Beeson Divinity School in May 2020 and is now living with his wife Jean in Charlottesville, VA. His two most recent books (out of more than twenty) were published in the last year: Race and Covenant, and Understanding the Jewish Roots of Christianity. He is teaching a course (via Zoom) at Jerusalem Seminary, writing another book and various articles, and helping teach six of his twelve grandchildren. Jack Regan and his wife Ginger Krawiec must have missed the Lth Reunion postponement email as they showed up in NYC on October 22 (actually, they just decided to use the hotel reservation they had made many moons prior). They took advantage of the trip by having dinner at the home of Jim Bergin and Ellen Lukens (where we regaled our wives with tales of the "Band Committee"), a visit to the MOMA, and an evening at David Byrne's American Utopia, followed by a couple of rounds in a Times Square gin mill with Ken Dee. After a pilgrimage to Levon Helm's Barn (deceased drummer for The Band) in Woodstock for a show by Larry Campbell (Fordham Prep '71) and Teresa Williams, they moseyed down to Paris, VA for a couple of nights at the Ashby Inn, built in 1829, with Ed Murphy and his wife Miriam Eisenhardt. The stay included a winery visit, a tour of the Farnham Colossi and Unger, WV, and enormous breakfasts at the Inn. Jack and Ginger have battled pandemic fever with road trips, including the Faux Reunion detailed above, and a trip to attend a Sunday service at the Edwina Church of God in Jesus Christ's Name in Newport, TN, which featured some poisonous serpent handling (copperhead; see nearby photo) by Pastor Jimmy Morrow. Jack and Ginger also added to their collection of self-taught Southern art with a couple of the Pastor's pieces in paint, wood, and fiber. Further from Ed Murphy: Ed is "semi-retired" and sheltering at home in Berkeley, CA. Ed's frustration with his inability to pursue his HIV research and teaching activities in South Africa has been lessened by the additional time he has in his studio to paint. His artistic efforts have garnered occasional, local appreciation. Al Simonti recently posted a photo of himself on Instagram with “the next Senator from Georgia,” University of Georgia star running back Herschel Walker. Dr. Mike Fitzgerald continues to see patients in his Pediatric practice, seeing many families with COVID but noting that children mostly do well. On vaccines, Mike says: “I have received my Moderna vaccines. No side effects, so our class should all get the vaccine. Get vaccinated. Not from Fauci, from Fitzgerald.” Charles Radcliffe has again been named one of the top wealth advisors in New York by Forbes.com. His team at First Republic Investment Management is responsible for over $400 million in client assets. As our country opens back up, Dennis Blair has had the opportunity to perform for live audiences again. Should he choose to do so, he can now travel not only with his music and comedy CDs but also with his book, “Touring with Legends,” available on Amazon and at BearManorMedia.com. Dennis writes that the book is “about my experiences as an opening act for tons of famous folks including Rodney Dangerfield, Joan Rivers, Tom Jones, The Beach Boys, Norm McDonald, and 18 years with George Carlin. Lots of ‘backstage’ stories about life on the road with some of the biggest names in showbiz. More fun than a barrel of comedians.” [Your scribe enjoyed it a great deal!] Gene Logusch wrote in to share his third-person update. “After getting a PhD in Chemistry from Columbia (1979), Gene moved to St. Louis, where he had a twenty-year research and management career at Monsanto (now Bayer). He went on to a second career of teaching high school Physics and Chemistry, now in its 20th year. He and his wife Sherry, also a scientist and high school teacher, have three kids (22, 19 and 16). The oldest two boys both play DI NCAA baseball. Gene was ordained a deacon in the Ukrainian Catholic Church in 2007, and he is also the pastor/administrator of a parish in St. Louis that ministers mostly to poor Eastern European immigrants and refugees. It almost came to an end last spring when Gene got COVID and suffered severe cardiomyopathy and heart failure. He has successfully recovered and rehabbed and continues working daily on all fronts. ‘Every morning I wake up I realize our sweet Lord has given me the gift of another day, with the expectation that I give back to Him and all others that I can. As Denzel Washington likes to say, no one has ever seen a hearse towing a U-Haul trailer.” Classmates and friends, please keep those cards and letters, emails and texts, calls and social media postings coming in.

Our class will celebrate its 50th Reunion at Regis High School on June 11, 2022. By the time you read this, you should have heard from the Reunion Committee about plans for the reunion. I hope to see many of you there. Greg Czuchlewski writes: “The pleasures of having retired to my childhood home in Woodside took a hit when Hurricane Ida poured two feet of water into our basement and garage. Quite a shock seeing a washing machine float across the room! No major damage, but we lost several wardrobes, lots of leather jackets, boots and bags, dozens of books, and a water heater. Agnes remarkably salvaged scads of clothes while I worked on scores of CDs. It put the cats off their feed at first, from the stress and dampness in the air. But ultimately we're recovering from the ordeal. Pretty impressive what these old bones and brains can do when called upon. And the garage will finally get cleared out!” Regina and Bob Schneider welcomed a new granddaughter, Giuliana, in September. Bob, John Rogers and Jim Burdi play golf together on a regular basis. Jim says that he laid off the game for nine years on account of his vision problems, but John persuaded him to take it up again last summer. Thanks to the corneal transplant surgery he underwent in 2018, Jim says, “although the ball still goes into the trees or the water, at least I can see it.” Jim also reports that he and Cathy have moved to Long Beach, Long Island to enjoy a new seaside lifestyle. Tom Abate called it quits in October, after eight years at Stanford, and “nearly 50 years of doing lots of other things to bring home a paycheck.” Steve Kaczynski's son Andrew ran, and finished, the Boston Marathon to raise money for Dana Farber's childhood brain cancer fund that he and his wife Rachel created in honor of Steve's granddaughter Francesca, who passed away from ATRT brain cancer on Christmas Eve. Steve is proud to say that “to date, they have raised over $1.4 million for this woefully underfunded disease research.” Luc Sante “wishes you all to know that gender transition has occurred. My name is now Lucy, my pronoun ‘she.’ The matter came as a road-to-Damascus revelation in mid-February 2021 but was not entirely a surprise. I have known I was transgender since at least age 11 and probably earlier, but suppressed and denied that fact for well over half a century. I am much happier now.” Your class correspondent (a/k/a Kevin Farrelly) recently met up with two classmates I have not seen since our graduation. I had lunch in Bryant Park with Peter Farranto, who was visiting NYC from Atlanta. Peter is now retired and has been doing a great deal of traveling. It was nice seeing Peter's face since I spent most of freshman year looking at the back of his head when I sat directly behind him in alphabetical order. I also had dinner near Lincoln Center with F. Paul Driscoll, who is the editor-in-chief of Opera News, a magazine published by the Metropolitan Opera Guild. We laughed about the many times Paul wrote letters (purportedly signed by parents) for those who wanted to be excused from gym class. Paul kept an assortment of stationeries in his locker so as to fool Ed Lata. I also enjoyed having lunch (again in Bryant Park – a favorite of mine) with Bob Friel '71 who was visiting from California to attend his 50th Regis reunion in September. See you at our reunion on June 11!

John Hall writes: “I've retired (mostly – still a few cases working toward settlement) and we bought a place in Southport, NC. Fishing, golf, pickleball (seriously, it's fun) and nearby beach. Life cannot get much better. Rich Dries was down visiting for a week (set up a remote office) and we had a blast.” Joseph Ochoa writes: “Well I passed the three year mark of being retired, boy how time flew! Of course COVID taking up half of it seemed to speed things along. It's shocking how fast three years of retirement passed when compared to three years of high school. Feels sometimes like I will wake up one day and ten years have passed. My mother passed away from COVID in August, so I am an orphan now. I am actually staying busy, like most COVID refugees did some remodeling, still travel in the RV it's a good get away. Just got back to home base in FL and hope to connect with Tom Dudar again soon and get a chance to heckle Jim Solloway on Facebook.” Richard O'Leary writes: “Kelly and I are living in Bonita Springs, FL to avoid NJ Income Tax. COVID has helped prove that I can work remotely. I am looking forward to retiring in a year or so. My oldest daughter, Caitlin, got married on October 8, 2021. My oldest son, Colin, is finishing his fourth year of Residency in Pediatrics and Internal Medicine, just got engaged and will be married in Osterville, MA on June 24, 2022. He will be moving to Boston to start the next phase of his medical career. My son, Casey, just graduated from Columbia Teachers College with his M.A. in counseling and is working for The Foundling Society in New York. My youngest, Colleen, just finished a clerkship on the 5th Circuit and will be starting as an associate at Paterson, Belknap in Manhattan.” John Canavan writes: “Gail and I are enjoying our first grandchild Mia who is now 4 months old. Planning a western ski trip with some fellow class of '74 ski bums. Keep an eye out for a COVID- delayed joint 65th birthday bash some time next year.”

John Carberry reports: “In August, I made my annual trip to Saratoga Springs, NY for the racing season. I knew going up I'd meet up with Jim Corrao, but we were both pleasantly surprised when Alan Mele arrived with his lovely wife Laura. No fortunes were won or lost, but we all had a great time. Effective September 11 became Board President of Pegasus Therapeutic Riding, a charitable organization located in Brewster, NY, offering equine assisted therapy (EAT) to people with disabilities, veterans suffering from PTSD, and first responders. We are also partnering with the Man O' War Foundation and Columbia University in their research into how EAT creates changes in the neural processes of those suffering from PTSD, helping them to overcome its effects. I see Steve Seagriff occasionally and he still has a full head of hair! Pre-COVID those of us living in Fairfield County (me, Joe Clyne, Colm Dobbyn, Mike Curran and Steve Seagriff) would get together occasionally. I'm hoping we can pick up those meetups soon.” In other news, at the end of August Kevin Rush '78 passed through Charlottesville, VA and visited with Michael Del Rosso for a couple of days, on his way back to NJ. Class correspondent Michael Del Rosso also stays in regular contact with several members of the Class of '75, including Dr. Richard Lee, current Provost and VP of Academic Affairs and former chair of the Department of English Literature at State University of New York at Oneonta, where Rich and his wife Ginny have resided for over thirty years. Their son, Dr. Michael Lee, who is one of the finest young men this correspondent has ever met, is an aeronautical and mechanical engineer who completed his Doctorate in Nonlinear Dynamics of Turbulence in 2020 at Duke University Graduate School. Dr. Michael Lee is presently employed as a Research Aerospace Engineer at NASA Langley Research Center, and shares his father's wicked-smart sense of humor. Demonstrating the importance of patience, the Regis Math and Physics departments just had to wait a generation for their efforts to produce a rocket scientist.

Some updates from folks we do not hear from often.... Greg Harris and his wife were in Budapest in early June. They were visiting a Jesuit church when they heard the sad news on Tim Grealy and said a special prayer for him. A mini reunion of Bob Lent, Frank Pietrantonio, Dave Pluta, Mike Tupone, Rich Picerni, and Ray Schmierer all gathered together in Ghent, NY to make/record music, eat great food, drink fine drinks and soak in one another's company for the first time in almost two years. Frank wrote "Any class reunion we have should be half as restorative. It will do all us 62/63 year olds wonders." (see photo in this issue). Frank added a personal update... "After 36 years of practicing patent law, I am embarking on a new career --high school math teacher. Inspirations abound, from Fr. Watson, to Herbie Sikso, to my daughter who has been teaching for 7 years. It is time to be a better version of "men for others." Leo Sullivan reported in on career change as well.... "I am turning the page to a new chapter in my career. I am now the Dean of Education at the medical school. I doubt that any of my classmates or me would have envisioned this happening 45 years ago when we graduated." Hugh Finnegan adds that he and Peggy welcomed their 3rd grandchild (and second granddaughter), Nora Margaret. Rich Slattery and Sheila Casey were married on October 9 in Alexandria, Virginia, where they live. Sheila works in the European Bureau of the State Department; Rich is about to complete his 30th year at Amtrak, where he is presently Senior Research Director. Steve Pecorini crossed paths with Jon Powers in a most random location... cycling on the Long Beach boardwalk on a sunny day in late summer. Steve was providing moral support to his son, who rode 24 hours to help raise $30K for the homeless veterans and families that New Ground serves (Steve works with them now). Finally, Danny Savio's family held a memorial for him in October, near Greenwich, CT. Our class was represented by Art Bonnano, Kevin Huvane, Kevin Koestner, Pete McFadden, Charlie McGovern, Rich Picerni, Jon Powers and Barbara Ross. It was a wonderful tribute to Dan, where many family and friends shared similar memories of his smile, tenderness, and warmth to all. RIP Dan!

Classmates Bob Lent '76, Frank Pietrantonio '76, Dave Pluta '76, Mike Tupone '76, Rich Picerni '76, and Ray Schmierer '76 gathered in Ghent, NY.

New Yorkers Seamus Carroll, Jack Hughes, Jim Rohan, Rob McKenna, and Bernie Kilkelly welcomed Elio Martinez up from Miami and Brendan Heneghan in from Chicago. Jim Rohan is keeping busy teaching Math at St. Sebastian's Academy in Woodside. Hopefully the students are better behaved than they were in the 1970's! We have multiple precincts reporting this edition. Tim Murphy reports that several Regians attended the celebrations of Peter Barrasso's life in Basking Ridge, NJ, in July. In attendance were: Frank Messina, Marcos Rodriguez, John Scola, Bill Tietjen, Peter McAlinney, Kevin Downes, Joe Murphy, and Tim Murphy, as well as Mike LaRussa's widow, Rosemarie Abate. John Scola is recovering well and back to playing ice hockey (in Phoenix, AZ). Dennis Shea is back in the States, living in Virginia with his wife and daughter after several years serving as a diplomat in Geneva. John Morgan has moved from Brooklyn to Providence, RI. Former ultimate Islanders fanatic Rick Walczewski is now a big Tampa Lightning fan (hard to believe); he lives just north of Tampa with his beautiful family. Duane Blue Spruce is the Project Manager of the team at the National Museum of the American Indian that recently launched an online photo essay of 'The COVID-19 Outbreak in the Navajo Nation' --check it out; it's great. Also check out Russ Altman's podcast, 'The Future of Everything' --interesting stuff! Tim also reported in from Citi Field in late August, with a great photo, where he and a number of 79'ers gathered to celebrate Marcos Rodriguez's birthday, including Kevin Downes, Peter McAlinney, Frank Messina, John Scola, Bill Tietjen, and of course Tim and Marcos. Pat Galizio and his wife Cindy, while in California to visit their son, stopped in to visit with Joe Whitman and his wife Vicky in their home in Palos Verdes Estates, hiking along the ocean and catching up on each other's lives and families (photo attached). Pat also notes that it was good to see that Joe is still a diehard Ranger fan, after being away from New York for decades. Finally, Fabian Fondriest sent in another photo, this one from a gathering hosted in October by John Morgan and his wife Emily Morgan at their beach house in Wareham, MA. In the photo, left to right, are Beth and Bob McDermott, John Morgan, Fr. Tom Massaro, S.J., Fabian and Suzanne Fondriest, and Audrey and Rich Henderson. Emily Morgan was the photographer, so unfortunately she could not be in the picture. Lots of laughs, good conversation, and great spread.

Beth and Bob McDermott '79, John Morgan '79, Fr. Tom Massaro, S.J. '79, Suzanne and Fabian Fondriest '79, and Audrey and Rich Henderson '79 got together in Wareham, MA in October.

Cindy and Pat Galizio '79 visited Vicky and Joe Whitman '79 in California.

John Dieffenbach, jjdieffenbach@gmail.com

Hello Class of '81. Thanks for the updates! Here's the latest news on our classmates: Norberto Barba was just elected to the National Board of the Director's Guild of America, joining Steven Spielberg, Ron Howard, Christopher Nolan, Ava Duvernay, and the like in charting the Guild's future. His son, Sebastian, is at New School and Raoul at School of Visual Arts. They're sharing their own place in Stuyvesant Town and "loving it." Mark Walter's book, Everyone Loves a Parade!, is now available in hardcover, paperback, and e-book format. The book is a history of New York City's ticker tape parades and uses those events as a lens to examine how the city has changed over the past 150 years, as well as how our culture has evolved: who and how we celebrate heroes and visiting dignitaries. The book explores how this unique NYC tradition developed and evolved over time. From the massive celebrations for Charles Lindbergh and General MacArthur and the city's victorious sports teams, to parades for people whose fame has faded over time (and a few who weren't all that famous even in their day) -- the book brings them all back to life. Co-authored by Mark Walter and his father John (who passed away from COVID before the work could be completed), the book covers every parade from the 1886 Dedication of the Statue of Liberty to the most recent parade for the Hometown Heroes of the COVID pandemic. Mike Sanderson is also working his literary side, writing small pieces of fiction, and currently writing a novel called Smooth Like a Rhapsody. Mike publishes the smaller pieces online "but not as myself, Michael Arthur Sanderson, aspiring novel writer; but as Michael Arthur Sanderson, famous author of the internationally best-selling novel Smooth Like a Rhapsody." Mike also writes essays on his theory of art, or art he finds influential through the lens of that persona. "So, for instance, the piece I'm working on now about Martin Scorsese references my very public feud with him when I didn't want him to direct the film adaptation of my novel because I wanted Wong Kar-wai." Mike says it's supposed to be a comment on identity and objectivity in the age of the Internet. "I am also writing personal essays online anonymously about my toxic family and how my battles with them left me mere days away from homelessness at one point, led to my estrangement from them all, and decades long battle with depression and anxiety which I try REALLY hard to hide behind humor. My ultimate goal is to get enough followers under both persona to eventually meld the two in some effort to blow the whole thing to hell since that is what humanity is currently doing: working extremely hard to blow thousands of years of cultural, social, and technological advancement straight to hell. The stories are funny though, I think, for the most part. You can find them under the name Michael Arthur Sanderson on either medium or vocal media. I also have two cats whom I either love, hate, or both. And a wife." Paul Walczyk writes: "It has been decades since I submitted anything for Prowlings. I was inspired by Paula Niera's recent post, and while this surely will not be as inspirational a post, I wanted to share a few things. Firstly, I want to say how great the Zoom calls were, especially the reunion call. It was fantastic to see so many of you after so many years. A lot has changed for all of us, but I got the sense that we all are all similar people to whom we were at our cores, when we left 84th Street for the last time. That was really great to experience. Personally, I have been working in the marketing and advertising space as either a client or in the agency world since graduation from college. I currently work for Merkle, which is a business of Dentsu, a Japanese holding company. My plan is to work a few more years and figure out what my next path will be. Advertising is a young person's game, and that, I am not. My wife Christine and I have lived in Bel Air, MD for over 20 years, where we raised our daughter Allison, who lives in Baltimore (who is a Cardiac ICU nurse and has Joe Napolitano as a mentor...right?) and a son Scott, who lives in Philly and works for an environmental engineering consultancy. Christine and I have been traveling as much as we can over the last few years. We returned from a trip to Australia and New Zealand on March 10, 2020, just before the world changed. We have been able to take a couple of trips this year, including a trip in August to Malta and the Adriatic, and a recent trip to Hawaii as a family. Iceland is next on the list, God willing, during Christmas week, to hopefully see the Northern Lights. I have had the opportunity to spend some time virtually with Joe Nap pre-pandemic and Joe Pizzimenti in the last few weeks. I invited them to participate in a virtual weekly small group that I facilitate, sponsored by a progressive Catholic church called Church of the Nativity. Nativity has numerous in-person and virtual small groups, and over 1400 people in the parish participate in a small group. Our group was the first virtual group (pre-pandemic) and includes men who live in several states, including MD, NJ, OH, and FL. It has been great to share the experience with some of my Regis brothers. If you are interested in learning more feel free to reach out. I want to thank all of you for having been a part of my life and I wish you all much happiness and peace.

AMDG. paulwalczyk@gmail.com." Joe Pizzimenti is now an "itinerant professor," splitting time between San Antonio and Baldwin Park, FL. He and his wife, Claire, "are empty nesters, at least for the time being." Joe traveled to Sicily and visited the small fishing village where his maternal grandparents were born. "Amazing to walk those streets and see the small church where they got married. People there of all ages looked like me, a disturbing thought!" Joe and Claire are looking forward to having their three kids visit for the holidays, and visiting them in their respective cities (Brooklyn, Tucson, Austin). "We are a family of foodies, so there is no telling what dishes will emerge from la cucina," Joe says. Joe Napolitano celebrated his 30th anniversary! He and his wife have two teenage sons, 19 and 16 years old. Joe got back into clinical administration in March 2020 (yes, at the start of the COVID pandemic!) after 20+ years in health philanthropy/community health. He is Vice President of Patient Care Services for two hospitals in eastern Pennsylvania. "I took a little bit of a circuitous professional career route," Joe says. "I started off in hospital administration in the Lehigh Valley (PA) after graduate school (first time) then spent a few years at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. I went back to school to receive my BSN and begin my career in nursing. Spent 10+ years in Philadelphia at the Hospital of University of Pennsylvania (HUP) most of it in Trauma/Critical Care as a nurse/nurse practitioner. Got an MSN along the way. After a significant injury, I had to leave the bedside and wound up in health philanthropy/community health. PhD along the way. I was honored to be asked by Governor Rendell to become a member of the Pennsylvania State Board of Nursing, which I did for 5 years. I am now the Chair of the Board of the PA Action Coalition, a group dedicated to promoting a healthy Pennsylvania through improvements in the quality, accessibility, and safety of nursing. I am fortunate to stay in touch with Paul Walczyk and Mike Randazzo. Recommend any and all consider the men's groups Paul is part of at his parish. You can virtually join." Joe also got to visit with Mike and his wife, Renee, and two of their three boys over the summer when one of their sons played in a baseball tournament in Bethlehem, PA. Joe also took up martial arts and became a kung fu instructor, and has since transitioned to more yoga and Tai Chi. "It was great to 'see' everyone, albeit virtually, for our 40th Reunion," Joe says. "Look forward to (re)connecting with all. Stay safe, be well. Peace. AMDG." Chris Varrone moved to Boulder, CO in 2020 and bought a house there on open space this summer. "Love it, get to hike nearly every day in the foothills. All Regians welcome to visit!" Chris says. His daughter, Emilia (28) is a doctor doing residency in Richmond (ophthalmology). She also got married in Jackson Hole in September. Son Espen (25) sells software in Manhattan and daughter Elise (20) will finish her BA in Psychology at Tulane remotely from Copenhagen. Chris continues to work in "cleantech"; currently working in carbon capture and sequestration (CCS) for Carbon GeoCapture based in Laramie, Wyoming, and also working for an innovative packaging company in Ohio, spun out of Procter & Gamble (Aeroflexx). Gus Haracopos and Dom Ferro and his wife, Kath, visited with the Varrones in August and all had a great time. Gerry Bradley took his first international trip in 18 months. He was in Kenya for 10 days. "Not a bad journey but wearing a mask for close to 24 hours is not fun and there are a few hoops you need to jump through when you travel, Gerry says. "COVID PCR tests coming and going, vaccine requirements etc., but it was good to be on the road." Gerry's wife is currently working with a tutoring center. Albert Kish has two sons attending the Catholic University of America in Washington, DC, and another at The Heights School in Potomac, MD. Al and family have lived in Bethesda, MD, since 1999, and Al works on federal tax law matters for Bloomberg INDG in Arlington, VA. Al has been with Bloomberg since 2014. Al published an article on Opportunity Zone transaction timing matters in the Bloomberg Tax Real Estate Journal in July 2021, and Al is Bloomberg's lead editor for the Tax Management Portfolio on Investments in Qualified Opportunity Zones, available on the subscription Bloomberg Tax website and posted at Buchanan, Ingersoll & Rooney PC's website.

As I sit and write these notes, the Class of 1982 marches steadily toward its...gasp...40th year as alumni. It's hard to believe that all of those fresh faces in the Regis quadrangle in September 1978 have somehow transformed into the faces of grizzled veterans. Each cycle there are reports of graduations, wedding anniversaries, and in each case the numbers keep getting higher. Congrats to all of you for weathering the ups and downs and retaining your own unique Regis spirit. Before I go any further, I feel I would be remiss if I did not mention the sadness I know we all felt upon learning of the sudden passing of our classmate, Alfonso Russo. Alfonso was a colorful character with a very tender heart. He was one of the first Regians I met that first day. He would love to remind me now and then that in freshman year he and I somehow found sufficient attention span over multiple days to play the strategy board game "Empire of China" in the second floor resource center, maybe with Gerald Coamey. The nerd quotient was high, but at least we weren't playing Dungeons and Dragons! The most lasting image of Alfonso I have in my head is of him roller-skating the Regis Walk-a-Thon in a big New York Rangers jersey. So many of us have fond memories of our interactions with him and have other images in mind. Our thoughts are with Alfonso and all of the other classmates we have lost over the years. On to happier news. Christopher Derby S.J., writes that as of November 2021 he will have a new assignment as Assistant to the Provincial for Spiritual Ministries and will be living and working on East 83rd Street, right around the corner from Regis! Chris previously had served as Executive Director of the Jesuit Center for Spiritual Growth in Wernersville, PA, which sadly closed in August 2021. He was featured in an article about the 90-year history of the Jesuits in Wernersville in the Jesuits, the magazine from the US East Jesuits Province. Anthony Spina, Joe Peiser and their spouses met up for dinner at a trendy new restaurant in Honesdale, PA in July (seems like everyone is in Pennsylvania these days). Anthony reports that "It was an excellent meal and it was great to catch up in person after a few years. We talked kids, colleges and insurance. A good time was had by all." Anthony attached a photo for potential inclusion in the Alumni News, and betraying his past life as an editor of the Regian, provided me with guidance on what position on the page the photo should appear. Arthur Xanthos, Patrick McGoldrick and I met at Art's house in Darien, CT over the summer. It was a full family gathering, including spouses and four children. While we are on the topic of restaurants, I highly recommend the Indian spot where we enjoyed dinner. If anyone wants to know the name and location, you should reach out to Art. Well worth the visit. Dennis McCooe has been busy making the rounds with his former “Who Wants To Be a Preppie?” colleagues. Tim Gallagher hosted Dennis and John McElroy on Cape Cod, and then he shared lunch with Ed Fargis in HoHoKus. A Class of 1982 alumni zoom call planned by Fred Lynch was a big success. There was a lot of catching up and a discussion of the status of the Class of 1982 Scholarship Fund. There was chatter of the upcoming 40th year reunion and whether the site of the former Shubert’s should be the center of festivities. Dan McGrath suggests programming an endless cycle of Devo and Cars tunes on the jukebox (virtual or old school). Fred and his wife celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary this year. Tim Dowling wasn’t able to join the call but added to the good cheer with the news that he and his wife are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary. Anthony Spina is also at 25. Not to be outdone, Greg Pitaro reported 32 years. The Class of 1982 remains active on social media. They range from the enjoyable (Mario Casella’s concert reviews) to the unbearable (Jim Livio’s rants about the NY Mets). It’s great to be able to see and hear from everyone over those channels now and then. The goal for this edition of the Alumni News was to get some photos into the magazine. Take a look around the magazine. Hopefully a few of our submissions made it. Be well, everyone.

Francis Joanlanne and Jaraslow Kiciuk met up at Clearwater Beach in October. Although it was the first time seeing each other in over 30 years, it felt like old times right away. As Frank recounted, “we had a great time reminiscing about IC-1 and the rest of the class of ‘84 and look forward to seeing each other soon and perhaps along with other Florida-based or part time Floridian, 1984 classmates.” COVID was not enough of a foe to keep the class of ‘84 from being well represented at JUG Night this year. Among the attendees were Bill Dunn, Tony Loscalzo, Kevin Duggan, Mark Coyne, Steve O’Donnell, Charlie Guarino, Pete Doyle, Tom Butler, Tom Lavin, Kevin Lee, and Tom Ryan. Pete summed it up best: “We hung out in the Quad, mostly telling colorful stories of the Olden Days...some of which were true.” And finally, we end on with a couple of sad entries...in a note that is becoming a little too common with our class, Frank Tubridy passed away on May 31st. Many of us had lost touch with Frank over the years, but the bond that we forged in our four years together at Regis can never be broken. As Dave Fernandez said upon hearing of Frank’s passing, “Although we may not have been in contact since our days at Regis, our bond supersedes the absence of time and that announcement peels just another layer away from our existence.” Mark Leeds’s dad passed away on July 18th. Lenny was a fixture at Regus basketball games and a coach himself. Please keep Frank and Mark’s families in your prayers.

Buffalo. Giles continues, “The 32 units rented up fast. The adjoining Community Beer Works brewery is an extended living room for tenants, dangerously close to the apartments. Tom and Dorothea invested in the brewery. Tom’s driving a race car branded in the design of their best selling beer. I caught a few of his races at Watkins Glen, NY this summer. We’re hunting around for a downstate brewpub. Good thing to discuss at Frank Gleason’s establishment in November.” Arsenio Santos (arsenio@gmail.com) writes in with a personal update: “I recently took a short break from my engineering management job at Cisco, in order to moonlight as a substitute heavy metal bassist on a ten-city tour throughout the West Coast. I’m definitely too old to be sleeping in the van, but otherwise had a great, loud time!” From Roger Rigaud (roger.rigaud@gmail.com): “Two months on the ground here in Monterrey, we could not be happier. From throwing the first pitch at winter baseball here to collaborating with the Mexican equivalent of the NBA to conduct a donation drive for Haitian and other migrants here in Nuevo Leon, it’s really diplomacy at its finest. Between the natural parks, carne asada and other amazing cuisine, historical landmarks and nearby pueblos magicos we are ready to host visitors to this city. Come on down!” From David Kennedy (dksdny@yahoo.com): “PS. Although my son Jonah isn’t getting as much time as goalie as he would like, Regis JV soccer is currently undefeated with 8 wins 3 ties 0 losses --- 38 goals for, only 6 against. Best in the league. Matt Sweeney proved that he has not lost an investigative step. He recently alerted the school to some unclaimed funds, as recorded by the Office of the New York State Comptroller. Nice job, Matt. Thankfully, the last few months also afforded the opportunity to gather with friends we have not seen in awhile. Ron Llewellyn, Luis Tello, Mike King, and Freddy Taveras gathered in Fresh Meadows, Queens for an end-of-summer meal. (JPK, Gene is a nice guy. He would still like you even if you showed up in the Crimson). Lastly, let us all congratulate Freddy Taveras for his recent appointment to Regis’ Board of Trustees. Great job, Freddy. Regis is in great hands!

Now that remote work is so popular, I have started working with Equinix in Sunnyvale, CA, helping to design and improve their Precision Time service, all from my basement near Rochester. This year, it was an unseasonably warm day as the sun was shining on October 15th, which helped make ForeTrost XX a truly special event. Over eighty attendees gathered at Harbor Links Golf Course in Port Washington on Long Island to enjoy golf and dinner while sharing a lot of memories and laughs. Thanks to everyone for attending. The members of the ForeTrost Committee are truly humbled that their simple idea to honor Greg has shown resiliency and remained a must attend event year after year for this amazing group of friends. A special thanks to all the William & Mary alums as well as our friends and family, who make this event every year! We had some great golf being played as James Gormley ’95, Kevin Walsh ’95, Ryan Lowry and Michael Coen earned the low team score, punctuated by a tie-breaking birdie on the 6th hole. Robert Bateh and Michael Daly showed uncanny accuracy earning closest to the pin prizes, while Jay Maceda and Stacy Joyce flexed their long drive abilities. In addition to our group from ’93 (Gerard McCarthy, Mike Smyth P’22, Michael Daly, Bill Black, Brendan Loonam, Dan Roche, Travers Garvin, Joe Mecca and Christian Talbot), there were many alums there who weren’t so fortunate to win any major awards but were proud to be amongst such a group of talented golfers. Nolan Shanahan ’91 made it all the way in from New Jersey, while native Long Islanders, John Cahalan ’96 and Rob Boller ’95, had a much shorter trip to the course. Travers Garvin and Michael Daly traveled all the way from the nation’s capital, while Dan Roche made it in from the northern wilds of Rockland County. The class of ’94 was well represented (debatable) by Bill Foley ’94, Matt Heinz ’94, Matt Guiney ’94, John Giordano ’94, Nick Brucella ’94 and Brendan McGuire ’94. Guthrie Garvin ’95 also joined us from ’95, Brian Gibbons ’96 and Brian Lennon ’96 from ’96 and Anthony Aulisa ’98 and Justin Dillon ’98 from the class of ’98. This year, we were also thrilled to welcome Joseph Mecca and Thomas Flood ’85, who joined in the festivities for dinner. They were able to witness the crowd serenading acting Regis President Christian Talbot as he thanked everyone for their generosity on behalf of Regis. We are all thrilled to see our classmate and friend in his new position. For 20 years, ForeTrost has benefitted the Gregory James Trost Memorial Gift and the REACH Program at Regis. Though we lost Greg on 9/11, the memory of his warm spirit and enduring friendship lives on in the hearts of those closest to him, as well as in the Memorial Gift established by his family at Regis. We hope that more of you can join us next year, as we continue a great tradition into our third decade! Thank you to everyone from the members of the committee: Robert Calarco, Michael Daly, Bill Foley ’94, Matt Guiney ’94, Matt Heinz ’94, Brendan Loonam, Gerard McCarthy, Michael McNamara, John McPadden, Brian O’Neill, Dan Roche and Michael Smyth.”

It’s been a difficult period for the Class of 1994. We sadly lost two members of our class recently. Charles Donovan passed away on September 11th, and Larry Broderick passed away on October 26th. Both will be sorely missed at future gatherings and events. We pass along our condolences to their families, friends, and loved ones.

26 years after walking out of that fancy church across the street, the Class of ’95 had its 25th reunion... Wasn’t even our fault - and we weren’t even just waiting on Usiak to get ready... I really do enjoy those things though, because it gives you an opportunity to catch up with some really great people, who you just don’t get to see often enough, and on that note: the night would have been a dull affair without power couple Joe King and his lovely wife Susan. They consistently bring the good vibes. Hope to see the two of you again soon. Shout out to Paul Manwell, Mike Tully, Mike Francis, Mike Brown, Geoff Campen & others for making long trips for the passed appetizers and camaraderie. Great seeing you boys. The most anticipated society wedding since Katy Perry & Orlando Bloom finally came true in the suburbs of Chicago this past summer, with the nuptials of Guthrie Garvin and Claire Ogdon. Congratulations again to the two of you. Guth & Claire even got tickets for the Cubs game the next afternoon, for all guests that wished to attend. A real touch of class, I thought (Wrigley concessions definitely the big winner that day).

Regions flocked to Chicago this summer to attend the wedding of Claire Ogdon and Guthrie Garvin ’95.

Matt McCann is happy to share that his family has relocated to the Metro Detroit area, where his wife is from. He is now admitted to practice law in Michigan as well as New York, and is practicing in the areas of Real Estate, Environmental, and Cannabis Law as an Associate Principal at Foley, Baron, Metzger & Juip, PLLC in Livonia, MI. For any Regions in the area or traveling to Detroit, please be in touch at McCann2113@gmail.com or mmccann@fbmjlaw.com. While his U of M football fan ship has only solidified, he will not be abandoning his beloved Mets for the Tigers (or any other franchise for that matter). Rest assured, he has also gotten involved in the Detroit Area hip hop/battle rap scene, and actually travels on 8 Mile for part of his daily commute. Mirren Petra Singer was born on 9/6/2021, 10 weeks early, weighing 3lbs 1oz to Charlie O’Donnell and Aja Singer. She is doing amazingly well and should be home well before her original November 18th due date. She’s very excited to see what new parenting apps and educational products her dad will be investing in out of his third Brooklyn Bridge Ventures fund focused on pre-seed and seed startups in NYC, which closed earlier this year. Dad will likely also need to be focused on fintech apps so he can figure out creative ways to afford her future education, given that she won’t be able to take advantage of the freebie he got for high school.

Shaun Leonardo’s newest art installation, Between Four Freedoms, debuted this fall at FDR Four Freedoms State Park. Shaun writes: “I want this to be a reinterpretation, not a rearticulation... What would the most vulnerable communities living and breathing today, especially considering the intersecting crises of the last year, say about the Four Freedoms? Freedom of worship. Freedom of speech. Freedom from want. Freedom from fear.” These images were generated through a series of workshops during which Shaun collaborated with participants to reinterpret the Four Freedoms through the lens of their own lived experiences — engaging with the capacity of hand gestures to convey their truths. The accompanying animations (activated onsite) offer a window into this otherwise intimate workshop process — giving viewers the opportunity to listen to different participants contemplate their experiences of freedom, whether withheld, barred, or actively stripped away.

Vivienne joins big brother Bradley in Charleston, South Carolina, where Dan is a surgical oncologist. After a decade as an Assistant US Attorney in the Southern District of New York, Russell Capone has taken to private practice at Cooley, LLP. Luke Grant Power was born on July 19, 2021 to proud parents Molly and John Power. All are well, including big sister Claire.

Congratulations are once again in order for several classmates. Caroline and Jim Garnevicus welcomed Jack Wells Garnevicus to the world on May 18, 2021. Jack weighed 6 lb 4 oz, and older brother Cole was quite thrilled. Luke Joseph Botta was born to Chelsea and Mike Botta July 27 (during the Olympics, hence the gear in the photo). Mom and baby are healthy; dad is tired. Sheva and Andrew Darcy welcomed their second child, Kevin, on August 27. Although they are exhausted due to his arrival and energetic older sister Kerry, they are thrilled. They look forward to his graduation from Regis in 2039. Lisa and Ryan Huber welcomed their third child, Lucy Elizabeth, to the world in the waning hours of October 28. She arrived a week ahead of schedule, already adopting an excessive sense of German punctuality. Lucy is the third and (Ryan is told) final addition to the Huber clan, following brother Owen (7) and sister Annabelle (5). NB to Ryan from Luigi and John: Remember, NOTHING is impossible with God!

Chelsea and Mike Botta '02 welcomed Luke Joseph on July 27, 2021. Mike thanks Chris Elms '02 for the themed onesie so Luke could match his parents for the photoshoot.

Caroline and Jim Garnevicus '02 welcomed Jack Wells on May 18, 2021. He joined big brother Cole.

Charlie Bonello and his wife Kathleen had a busy summer: they moved to Mt. Vernon and welcomed their twins, Charlie Jr. and Elizabeth. Along with Grace, now 2.5, they're eating their way through Southern Westchester's pizza reserves while Charlie has PTSD about his Regis commute. Matt Harrigan and his family have settled in on 11th street in Park Slope. Given the slog of 18 months of living with his in-laws and a year-long renovation that ran way over budget, you can rest assured you can find Matt there as he plans to live on 11th street until he expires. Maximilien Maisonrouge and his wife Laure welcomed Clara Elise Pucci-Sisti Maisonrouge to the world on September 13. Everyone is doing fine! Franz-Mary "The Franz" Francoeur has built his own recording studio, become a music producer and started recording his debut hip-hop solo album God's Will Be Done... under the alias "The Franz." He'll keep everyone posted on where you can check out his music. He now lives in East New York, Brooklyn after spending 8 years living in Boston and is happily living his best life!

Nick Naclerio and his wife Alexa welcomed a daughter in May, Dani Martina Naclerio. Nikola Lekic, MD married Susanna on July 28, 2018 at the Regis Chapel. Their daughter Stella Lekic arrived on January 24, 2020. He joined an Orthopedic Surgery practice in Stuart, FL where he specializes in hand/upper extremity surgery. Tim Scarella is a psychiatrist practicing at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston MA and is a member of the faculty of Harvard Medical School. He does clinical work and serves as the associate director of the BIDMC-Harvard Psychiatry Residency. In his free time, he writes crossword puzzles and plays guitar in a David Bowie tribute band. To what does he owe all of his success? The Magis, of course. And Coach Donodeo. Matt Kelly is still living in New Orleans, working at a network of public high schools in a challenging-but very interesting!-school year. Priorities for the year include expanding curriculum for core classes and elective offerings, building systems to help teachers provide data-based interventions for students with disabilities, and training new teachers and new teacher-leaders. John Uehlinger and his wife Danielle welcomed their first child, baby girl Quinn, into the world on April 30th. Quinn has already met five Class of 2004 Regians (including her father) and is reportedly not very impressed. Mark Corsillo noted his approval for the large amount of updates in this issue and requests his classmates keep it coming. Matt "Hezzy" Smith has stepped into a new role at the Harvard Law School Project on Disability. If you, someone you know, or your organization has questions about disability rights law or policy, send them his way: msmith@law.harvard.edu. But if you've been injured, then smash that Panek button: <https://www.eeplaw.com/panek>. On May 31st, Brian Taylor and his wife Jessica welcomed their daughter Madison Theresa Loughran Taylor. Madison loves meeting and seeing family and friends particularly Grandpa Ed Taylor '76.

In July, Charlie O'Brien got engaged to Jane Maher, originally introduced to Charlie by Jack McGovern. Congratulations to Charlie and Nathan! The book looks at different district attorneys moving away from a "tough on crime" approach in favor of restorative justice measures that emphasize rehabilitation over retribution. All profits from the book support the Thrive for Life Prison Project.
